In addition, expressions of appreciation for work on behalf of the industry were given for Floyd Hicks, who is retiring as professor of poultry science at Penn State, and Jim Wolf, immediate past Chairman of the Federation's Board of Directors.

In his remarks to the group, new Chairman Clarence Mitchel outlined three major goals of the Federation during the coming year.

The first objective is to improve the Federation's scholarship program to help fill the need for trained people in the industry. A scholarship committee is scheduled to meet this summer to plan an updated program.

The second goal is improvement in membership, with concentration on the mid-sized producers. A membership committee will set up a flat dues rate for producers to make the schedule more attractive to join.

Also, efforts will be made to strengthen the effectiveness of the Federation's organizational setup, particularly the Commodity Councils.

Heads of each of council's were introduced, including Dale M. Weaver, Broiler Council; Jim Wolf, Egg Council; and Leroy Zimmerman, Turkey Council.

Named Broiler Industryman of the Year, Gingrich was raised on the family farm in Myerstown, Lebanon County. After graduation from Penn State

HUNT VALLEY, Md. — Younger members of several Eastern milk marketing cooperatives gathered here this week to participate in the 10th Young Cooperator Program of the Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation, Inc.

Comprised of Inter-State Milk Producers Cooperative, Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Inc. and Capitol Milk Producers, the Pennmarva two-day young cooperator program included time for individual cooperative contests, discussions, tours, educational sessions and combined awards luncheon.

All four cooperatives announced their 1980 Young Cooperators at the luncheon Thursday.

Inter-State's contest included 20 contestants. Five were selected by a panel of three judges to serve on the young cooperators consultant committee for three year terms.

Top placing couple was Robert and Susan Winner, Moorestown, New Jersey. They operate a 315 acre farm where they milk 160 Holsteins.

Second place went to Allen Z. and Linda Wehr, Mifflinburg, Pa. Third place winners were Dennis and Mary Burns, Warriors Mark, Pa. Fourth place were Gerald and Debra Stoner, East Berlin, Pa. and fifth place were P. Thomas and Alice Mason, Chestertown, Maryland.

All five Inter-State winners will be attending American Institute of Cooperatives at Penn State in August and the two top placing couples will travel to Miami in November to attend the National Milk Producers Federation meetings.

FDA deferment requested

New milk test debuts Tuesday

BY SHEILA MILLER
ARRISBURG — Milk ducers, milk haulers, and manufacturers will be feeling the effects of Food and Drug Administration regulation, the Pasteurized Milk Ordinance finalized a little over ear ago

cording to G William se, chief of the Milk itation Division in the nsylvania Department of Agriculture, the FDA ruling is supposed to be in action starting July 1.

What the new rule calls for is a more sensitive antibiotic test for "the portion of the milk supply that is shipped interstate," said Fouse.

"Co-mingled raw milk and all pasteurized milk or milk products will be tested by one of two methods—Bacillus stearothermophilus disc assay method or Sarcina lutea cylinder plate method. This test replaces the Bacillus subtilis test which has been used in Pennsylvania for quite a few years," he explained.

Fouse noted the new testing methods are more sensitive and they will detect lower level of antibiotics, particularly penicillin.

As far as who will be affected by this new FDA testing regulation, Fouse said that all farms that ship their milk to interstate plants, and all plants with an interstate rating have to comply. "Eighty percent of the milk produced in Pennsylvania will fall under the new ruling," he said

Fouse pointed out the more sensitive test will be able to pick up the presence of small amounts of penicillin in milk. "If

Blue mold in fields; plow-under possible

LANCASTER COUNTY — There's blue mold in Lancaster County tobacco fields and some crops may need to be plowed under.

"We've found localized field infections in several sections of Lancaster County this week," Arnold Lueck, county extension agent and agronomist said.

"In all likelihood, some of the worst fields may need to be plowed under."

The localized field infections were reported in the southern end of the county, just south of Lancaster City and in the Washington Boro area.

In addition, instances of blue mold were spotted in seed beds in the Mount Joy-Elizabethtown area. Previously, seed bed problems were found in the eastern section of the county, including Christiana and the Leola-Leacock area.

The movement of the fungus into fields is believed due to carrying it from infected beds during transplanting. There is no indication that it is being spread from infected to healthy plants by air-borne spores.

Agent Lueck and John Yocum, of Penn State's Southeast Research Lab, Landisville, are recommending two grower practices:

Get rid of the seedbeds as soon as transplanting is completed. They should be plowed or disked under.

Field spraying is advisable, particularly for those growers who did not apply Ridomil and who already have blue mold in Smoothing the way in farm financing.

(Top) Steve Leiser, Pennfield Representative, examines financial records with Bill Shirey, Meadow Brook Farms, York, Pa (Bottom) Paul Whipple, Pennfield Customer Finance Manager, and C David Landis, Lititz, Pa after successful meeting at the bank

With the financial row a bit rougher to hoe lately, it helps to have a friend who's friendly with the bank. Someone who knows your work. A financial advisor who can deliver that extra confidence you deserve. All Pennfield Feed customers have access to this kind of financial help. And you'll be pleasantly surprised to know that our financial advisors know cows. They know feeds. Something the numbers people at the bank appreciate ... along with the way the Pennfield Computerized Total Ration Service can help you reduce waste. And here's how this money-saving service works: 1. We collect samples of your forage. 2. Then we evaluate the quality of your forage. We determine the total digestible nutrients. The fiber content. The protein content. The amount of carbohydrates. 3. The computer quickly spots any nutrients lacking in the forage. For your milking cows. And for your dry cows. It immediately points out the overfeeding of nutrients. Underfeeding, too. Both, of course, may be different at different times of the year. And the printout will tell you what you need. And when. 4. Your Penn Pro Professional advises you on the quantity and type of nutrients that should be added, to balance your total feeding program to your cows' nutritional requirements.

Try the Pennfield Computerized Total Ration Service. For better milk yields. For better profits. There's no cost or obligation. Just phone us today at Pennfield Feeds. Lancaster Farming says...

Fight over pennies later

The insecurity of the milk security fund continues to be apparent as SB 1287 comes through the state house

Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, bound by member policy, continues to fight for a two cent contribution by dealers to the fund Most other farmer groups are eager to accept a one cent contribution to get some kind of security on the books for dairymen, both independents and co-op members

Meantime, on Thursday another problem, this one dealing with a lack of sub-dealer bonding, was discovered and will have to be remedied

Earlier, the House leadership gave SB 1287 the same treatment Senate leadership gave it only technical ammendments were approved PFA's move to ammend the bill in committee was destroyed, 13-2

At the same time a memorandum signed by such diverse groups as Pennsylvania Farmers' Union, the State Grange, and the six members of the Dairy Cooperative Coalition repeated the general feeling that significant modification of SB 1287 will jeopardize passage of any security fund This trio certainly is correct

It's been hard enough to get that bill as far as it is The milk dealers nearly scuttled the whole thing before most farmer groups were aware it was coming In fact, the dealers are losing only to shear numbers—not from a lack of work

There will be enough concern over other provisions of the bill without hassling the contribution rate

There is an alternative to PFA's hard-line stand

We should hope PFA would allow the bill to pass with a one cent rate The current squabble endangers the fund's very existence

After all, PFA members want all the protection of a security bill Their argument is over contribution rates

Then later, in front of the Milk Marketing Board, PFA can argue the need for a two cent contribution

The bill, as written now, will allow for such an adjustment In fact, should PFA manage to put in its two-cent ammendment, the one-cent group could possibly have it repealed by PMMB

George Brumbaugh, the new PMMB head, is no dummy He has broad experience in several phases of dairying He, and his board members, can decide the question of contribution rates better than the bunch of congressmen from downtown Pittsburgh or center city Erie which PFA will be appealing to on the House floor

PFA can get its two cents worth from PMMB, later, where the question will be settled in a farm forum, and while farmers at least have the makings of better protection from dealer bankrupcies

PFA certainly has the right to fight for two cents But at this late date, the legislature is neither the time nor the place to quibble over pennies

PFA has other outdated policies, and policies which go against current realities, on its books Policies like its DDT or X-rated movie stands are not being pursued actively at the moment

Milk security contribution rate policy, equally as important, could be relegated to the same status, to be revived when the security bill becomes law and discussions on rates of contribution can be resumed before the Milk Marketing Board

Otherwise farmers and others who have worked for a security fund, including PFA, will end up losers all around

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

A BANQUET OF CONSEQUENCES!

Lesson for June 29, 1980

Background Scripture:
Ezekiel 1 1-3, 2 through 3, 17 through 19.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 137 1-6

I wish I could remember who first said this:

Sooner or later, everyone sits down to a banquet of consequences.

How true! And many of us fail to realize it! For, often, what we put down as the cruelty of fate, the injustice of life, or the indifference of God can be better understood as the banquet of consequences we have prepared for ourselves

The ancient Hebrews lying in Babylonian captivity are a case in point. Although they may not have proclaimed it openly, God knew what was in their hearts and through Ezekiel, his prophet, he told them: "...the house of Israel says, 'The way of the Lord is not just.' O house of Israel, are my ways not just? Is it not your ways that are not just? (18:25,26).

What God really wants is made clear in Ezekiel's words: ".. when a wicked man turns away from the wickedness he has committed and does what is lawful and right, he shall save his life" (18:27). What God really wants is the repentance of his children and their reformation "For I have no pleasure in the death of anyone, says the Lord God; so turn, and live" (18:32). The bitter banquet to which we eventually sit down is made certain, not because of God's will, but because of ours. The misery is the consequence of what we have done and not done, been and not been

God's Pleasure

Unless everything changes remarkably between the time this column is written and published, the world situation appears to be anything but encouraging. The threat of war, inflation, depression ("recession", if you like), hunger, galloping immorality, crime, disease, pollution — all these are a banquet table spread before us and we would like to decline sitting down and eating. We may want to blame God or something or someone else for this unappetizing prospect, but it is really the banquet of consequences we have prepared for ourselves, is it not?

A New Heart & Spirit

If we don't like the way things are going, instead of complaining, ought we not to seek in ourselves the cause of the world we face? What is there about our way of life, both as individuals and as a nation, that has turned the banquet of life into a meal of bitter herbs, decayed food, and stagnant drink?

Yet, the message of God is still this: "I have good news and bad news: the bad news is that you are preparing a bitter banquet for yourselves; but the good news is that you can avoid the banquet of bitter consequences if you will listen to me, search your hearts, and change yourselves and your society: "Cast away from all the transgressions which you have committed against me, and get yourselves a new heart and a new spirit!" (18 31)

TO BEWARE OF LEAD POISONING

Livestock producers are reminded of the danger of lead poisoning about the farm Cattle and sheep are curious and will lick crankcase oil, paints, or old batteries Some of these may contain enough lead to cause lead poisoning Signs of poisoning from lead are blindness, retarded growth, eye or ear twitching or uncoordinated gaits Prevention is the answer, lead poisoning is seldom curable Keep dangerous materials away from all livestock

TO CONTROL WEEDS UNDER ELECTRIC FENCES

Not all electric fences will continue to function with weeds touching, some may not be of the weed-burner strength This means that weeds growing up against the electric fence will short it out and there will not be any charge in the wire Livestock producers are using electric fences as they never did previously, this is a very economical method of controlling livestock

Either mowing or spraying under the wire with a weed killer will control this growth and allow the electric fence to carry the necessary charge No doubt the use of a weed killer will require less attention and give good results In the case of a double wire that requires one wire to be closer to the ground, weed control is very important

TO PLAN FOR SUMMER ALFALFA SEEDINGS

It seems to be early to be thinking about a late summer seeding of alfalfa, however, in another month this practice will be at hand One of the first steps in planning for this legume seedings is to ha[illegible] tested if it needs lime, then that application should be made as far as possible in advance of the seeding date Alfalfa still requires an alkaline soil; too many farmers are still guessing at the amount of lime needed

The investment in seed and labor is getting higher; therefore, good advance planning is most important In this part of the state the summer seedings should be made late in July or the first 10 days of August That time will be here shortly Make good plans for alfalfa seedings because they should last three to five years

TO BEWARE OF NEW GRAINS

The barley harvest is underway in this part of the country and some may be needed for feeding in the near future The feeding of new grains to livestock is possible under very careful management. If fed in too large amounts, digestive orders such as bloating and scouring may occur We suggest that the grain be allowed to go through a two-week curing period before being fed Then it should be inserted into the grain ration at a slow rate (10 to 20%)

Barley is a very popular livestock feed in this area and is a good substitute for corn In a few weeks wheat will be ready and may also be fed with care Again, it is suggested that it be allowed to cure for several weeks before feeding Wheat is not used as much for feeding purposes because of the greater danger of digestive problems. Smaller amounts in the ration, compared to barley, are suggested Barley and wheat can be used as livestock feeds but need special care when mixing in livestock rations

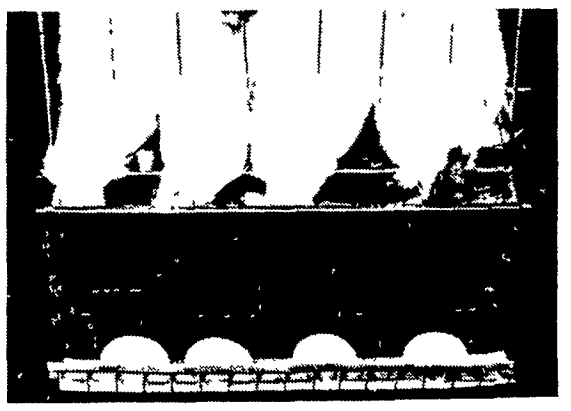
REVERSE CAGE LAYER SYSTEM



LESS BIRD STRESS

The system has been designed for bird comfort!

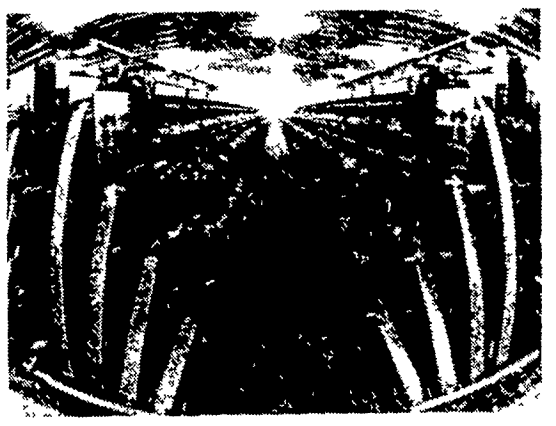
Each bird has her place at the feed trough Each has easy access to water Obstruction to light and the flow of air have been greatly reduced, providing more uniform ventilation and lighting for every bird Combined with Chore-Time's automatically controlled air inletting system, you get a layer house environment designed for bird comfort and the resulting better production



Not only the physical shape of the feed trough, but the operation of the feeder has been engineered to reduce feed waste The trough shape cuts down on feed loss from "raking" and "billing," while the feeder has been specifically designed for Chore-Time's programmed and performance feeding concept

★ LET US SHOW YOU A REVERSE CAGE SYSTEM IN OPERATION

The Air System With A Mind Of Its Own

Until now, most ventilation systems had one drawback. Air inlets had to be opened and closed by hand.

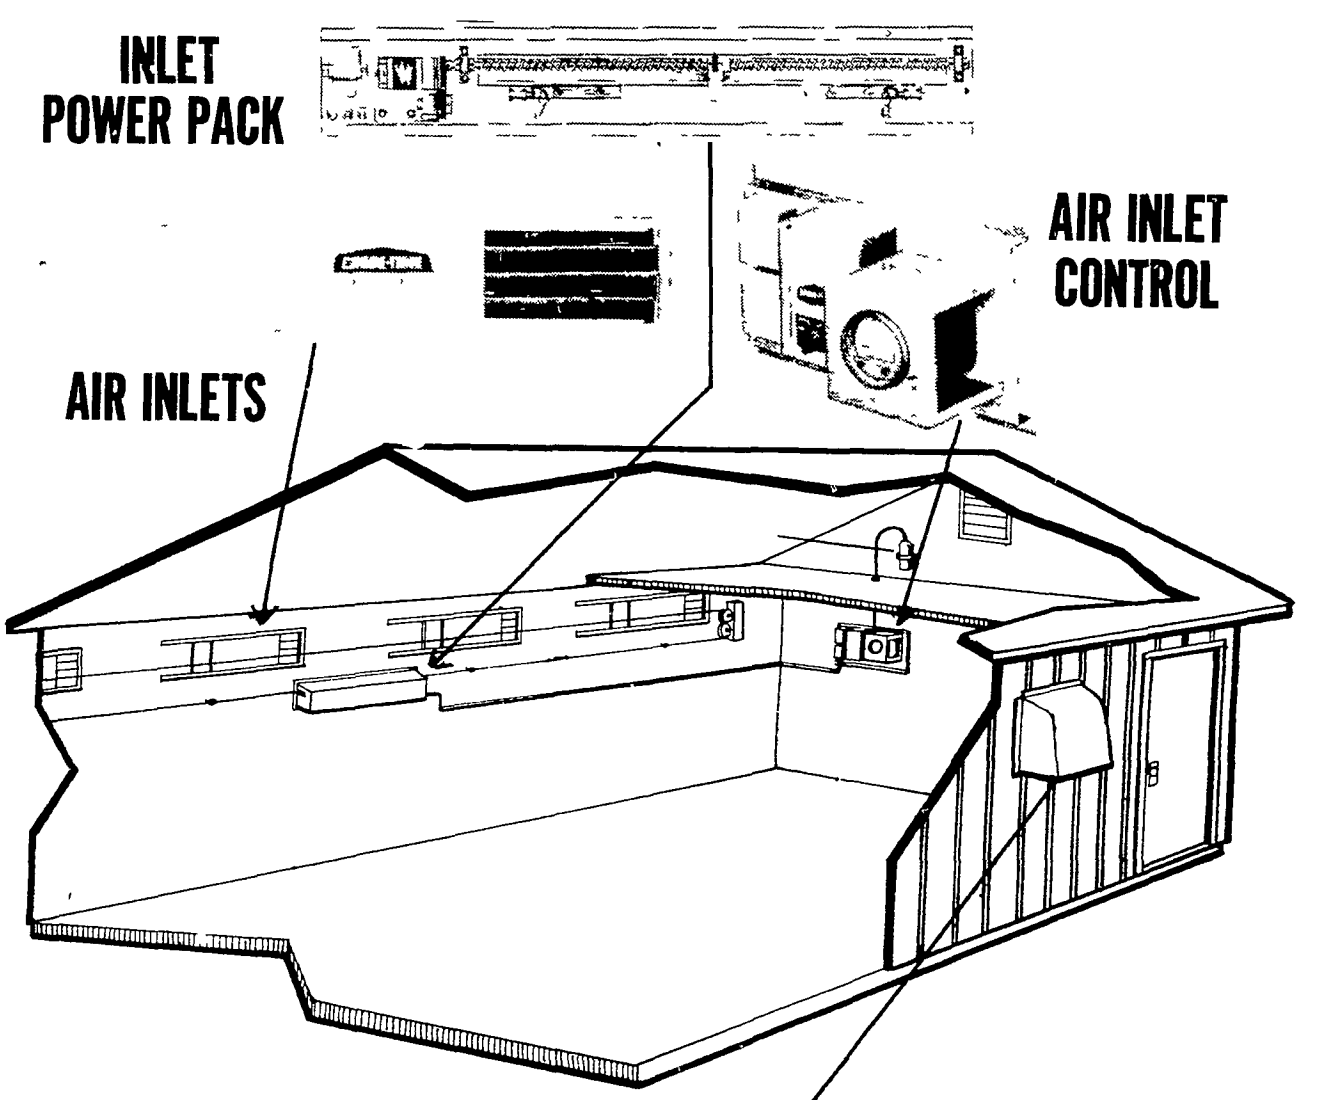
This was time consuming — and pretty much a matter of guesswork.

Now, Chore-Time has eliminated this problem.

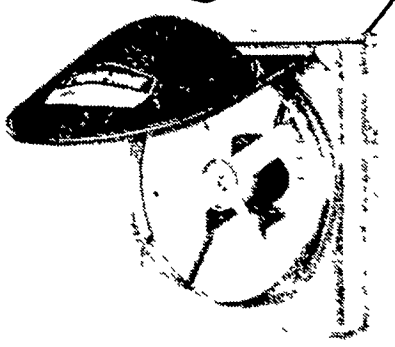
The Chore-Time system has a mind of its own and adjusts inlets — in conjunction with fan operation — to maintain air pressure at a constant, preset level.

This provides a degree of air and moisture accuracy never before possible in poultry and livestock buildings.

The new inlet control (pictured) is just one of many exclusive features that make Chore-Time air systems number one in performance and reliability



Four basic components go into the makeup of this ventilation system the fan, the inlet, the air inlet power pack, and the controls Coordinated, these four basic components can provide you with better conversion and performance by removing stresses due to lack of oxygen, excess humidity, noxious gases and temperature extremes



Reliability through simplicity, Chore-Time's advanced air system provides automatic control of incoming fresh air, moisture and heat for productive environmental control in agricultural buildings

Omaha Cattle

Thursday, June 26
Report supplied by USDA

Midweek prices on slaughter steers and heifers were 1.00-1.50 higher in generally aggressive trading. Cows were 1.50-2.00 higher, bulls steady to weak.

Four Day Receipts: 14,000; Last Week 12,400; Year Ago 9,600.

The upward spiral in fed cattle prices continued under a good demand stimulated by advancing prices on carcass beef at the wholesale level. The current upturn pushed closing levels to the highest point since last December and some 8.00-9.00 above the low time recorded in early April. Midweek trading slowed somewhat on steers, however, as some temporary instability developed in carcass trading, with processors reported bearish and packers holding a strong position. Supplies were slightly larger than the previous week, but were ideally distributed over the trading period. Weighing conditions usually favored the selling side with hot, humid weather encouraging rather liberal waterfills. The consist again included a liberal percentage choice steers with much of the heifer supply good to average-choice. Steers made up approximately 48 pct of the week's total and heifers 34 pct. Cows comprised 10 pct and feeders 6 pct.

STEERS: At midweek, two loads Choice 3 1252 lbs. 70.25. Few loads Choice and Prime 3 with end 4 and Choice 3 1085-1225 lbs. 69.40-69.75, several loads Choice and Prime 3-4 1138-1308 lbs. 69.00-69.50, two loads large share 4 1384 lbs. 68.00. Average of LS-214 detailed quotations for Choice 900-1100 lbs. steers this week 68.32; Choice 1100-1300 lbs. 68.48. Average cost slaughter steers this week 68.11, average weight 1178 lbs., as compared 66.17 and 1169 lbs. week ago. Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

The June 14 Sheila's Shorts gave very good advice to the fellow who wanted to start farming.

I think you should have mentioned that although things start looking good, when you think everything is going all right, that is the time things start going wrong; like cows get sick, and die for no reason and your equipment you think is in good shape, breaks down and many other little things.

Also in this week's issue (June 21st) you should come to see those pretty white tags in our heifers ears, and all the flys we have on them. We also mix Rabon in the feed and the flys seem as bad as last year.

Dear Editor:

I was disappointed to see the article, "Will diet change prevent heart attack?", in your paper that is dated June 14. It implies or states as facts those things which are unproven and are very likely false. With a farmer publication which should be supportive of the Animal Agriculture - dairy, meat and poultry — I would hope you would do a front page story on the recent report disputing the American Heart Association stand.

I do enjoy your paper and many of our staff find much useful information in it.

Dear Editor:

Congratulations on your editorial Independent Dairymen Need a voice." Well done.

Nothing has demonstrated this need more than the recent fight on the Milk Security Fund, which you mentioned.

The proposal for the fund originated in New York, as you know, where the cooperatives bragged about their success. They are not so sure today since it apparently is not working as well as expected.

After the Louden Hill ("I can sell for less and still make money") bankruptcy efforts were made to put in a fund in Pennsylvania. I believe the State Grange first came out with a recommendation that it be a farmer-financed fund — paid for and controlled by them. It didn't sell. Then, the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association came out with the split payment — dealers and farmers each paying half. This was on its way until the co-ops got organized.

They virtually took control of the "policy sessions" for both organizations and both groups came up with the "dealer pay all" concept. Oh, yes, the co-ops did not have to pay unless they wanted to There are few betting they will.

It was interesting to note at the recent meeting of the Agriculture Committee of the House of Representatives the "organizations" named by visitors to the meeting. Many said "Cooperatives for the Security Fund". "Let us not permit outselves to be charged."

We talked to many farmers who told us they would be happy to participate with the payment to assure adequate money and protection. Many legislators have heard the same but the pressure form the organized cooperatives does not permit any action.

There once was talk about a statewide referendum on the subject with cooperatives not having bloc voting privileges. Apparently this has been squelched, too, lest the individual and/or independent farmer might have a voice.

No one likes dealer bankruptcies but, in reality, losses to farmers from such failures are far less than losses due to co-op dues, co-op assessments, co-op reblending and the like. It would appear that a call by you to the Milk Marketing Board for the figures might make an interesting story — as a follow-up to your editorial.

I am labeled at "Anti-Co-op Geisinger", but this is not true. Cooperatives — when properly run — have a purpose. Unfortunately, some gears must have slipped since so many are in trouble. Eastern tries to say its latest $500 assessment is due to dealer bankruptcies which is not totally true. At times part of the blame is due to continued deliveries of milk to dealers who have not been paying.

The Grandview (New York) failure is listed with the comment that Eastern would not have lost that much if Pennsylvania had a Security Fund. This is untrue. It was an out-of-state company which did not buy milk itself in the state and thus was "unknown" to the Milk Marketing Board. It bought through Eastern.

And there have been allegations that the Grandview milk was shifted from New York producers to Pennsylvania when Grandview could not or would not pay into the Empire State's Security Fund. We don't know whether this is true, but we have read it in the public press again and again.

We read with interest your paragraph stating that "the only serious challenge to co-op ideas" came from our organization. I do not agree that I was working totally for "the dealers' interests and not the producers' interests".

Unless farmers are happy and satisfied (They should be with today's prices) the industry cannot continue on an even keel. My one big concern for farmers was those belonging to cooperatives who might not have protection (note assessments and the like). Also, with dealers only putting up the money there does not appear to be protection for a goodly number of Pennsylvania farmers shipping milk out of state.

True, some "foreign" dealers do pick up their own milk in the state and do file bonds and pay license fees. These farmers would be protected. Others do not. Milk is picked up by independent truckers and title does not change until the farmer-paid tanker drops off the milk at the platform of the buying handler — all this despite some provisions in Senate Bill 1287 relative to "Title Change".

With 1.5 billion pounds of milk reportedly being sold out of state there could be many farmers unprotected. At current blend rates this could be all or part of some $15 to $20 million worth of milk a month. We thought all farmers should have the privilege of protection.

Dear Editor

The "Journal of Soil and Water Conservation" contained an editorial which presented 10 land ethic prescriptions which follow. They are of particular interest to this region since so much of our farmland is being lost or threatened.

1. You ought to consider land as a resource that may be yours for a time but is also held in trust for the future. Land is not a commodity that any of us can own in the ordinary sense of the word.

2. You may be a trustee of the land and that will often confer private benefits on you, but you ought not to seek benefits that incur disbenefits on the community or other individuals.

3. If you are presently trusted with the management of a piece of land, you ought to use it in a manner that benefits the land and does not damage it. Some land uses are abuses that have irreversible consequences, and you ought to avoid such abuses.

4. You ought to accept that the use of land should be subject to public scrutiny and control and to exercise your responsibility, with others, in ensuring that no use is permitted that is damaging to society as a whole.

5. You ought to ensure that the land use controls developed in your area prevent irreversible damage, avoid waste, protect your natural and cultural heritage, stimulate visual order, regulate and control the unsightly, and safeguard individual liberties (such as mobility and a choice of housing and schooling, so long as those liberties do not impede the liberties of others).

6. You ought to recognize that the exercise of land use controls in the interest of the community can result in costs and benefits to individuals and be willing to see those costs and benefits equitably adjusted.

7. You ought to recognize that these controls can only be exercised democratically through governmental operations. Hence, you ought to expect an extension of government to give proper expression to this new land use ethic

8. You ought to accept that the administration of the ethic must reflect local circumstances and needs, so it will vary from place to place.

9 You ought to be ready to give time and talents to fight for this land use control that is vital for your continued freedom.

10. You ought to recognize that you may have to make some sacrifices, along with everyone else, for this control to be effective

Average price tops 45 cents at hog show, sale

LANCASTER — The average price for market hogs topped 45 cents in the Annual Lancaster Stockyards Show and Sale on Wednesday.

The sale average was $45.45 for the 21 lots of 10 hogs each entered in the annual event. This price included the champion and reserve champion lots. The average price excluding the two top lots was 44 68.

Championship honors went to the lot consigned by Cliff Charles, of Brook Manor Farm, Millersville. In the sale, the medium weight lot at 228 pounds brought 55.50. The lot was purchased by Hatfield.

The reserve championship went to another medium weight lot consigned by John Soltzfus, Narvon. At 223 pounds, the lot brought 50.00.

First place in the lightweight class went to the lot of Titus Nolt, New Holland. Bidding stopped at 46.50 on the lot.

In the heavyweight class, the first-place lot was consigned by Gary Westervelt, of Little Piggy Hill Farm, Watkins Glen, N.Y. Winning bid was 46.85.

Jerry Clemons, of Hatfield, served as judge. He nodded in favor of the Brook Manor Farm lot because of the animals' better cutability. Chairmen of the show and sale were Lloyd Hoover and Ed Prosser.—DA

Delmarva farmers are bullish on beans

CHESTERTOWN, MD — If farmers follow through on their April 1 intentions, the June 27 U.S. Department of Agriculture first planting report of the season will show soybean acreage higher than a year ago in the Delmarva and Mid-Atlantic areas, but lower in most other parts of the nation.

The state-by-state breakdown will probably show Maryland soybean acreage about even with last year's all-time record But soybean acreage intentions indicate a rise of six per cent in Delaware and 11 per cent in Virginia, with an over-all rise of six per cent for the Delmarva Peninsula.

Some possible explanations for this were offered last week by Extension specialists at the University of Maryland in College Park. John L. Crothers, Jr., senior marketing specialist in agricultural and resource economics, and David B. Jones, grain and oil crops specialist in the agronomy department, agreed that the following explanations seem most logical:

–Farmers are cutting down on high fertilizer costs by switching to soybeans, which require less nitrogen fertilizer than does corn;

–Delmarva farmers can be more flexible with cropping plans than Midwest farmers because the lighter soils on the Delmarva peninsula require waiting until spring before broadcasting nitrogen fertilizer for corn

–Double-cropping permits Delmarva farmers to grow both small grain and soybeans on the same land in a single year. This cuts down production costs for each crop. And the late-planted soybeans seem to yield as well, on the average, as early-planted soybeans grown on a single-crop basis.

Improved varieties of soybeans have played a big part in the success of double-cropping.

Meanwhile, rising costs of production for corn, wheat and soybeans make it difficult to produce these crops at a profit on a single-crop basis, Crothers points out. The outlook doesn't seem likely to change during the current crop year.

Cash soybean prices have improved slightly since April 1, Crothers noted, but corn prices have remained virtually unchanged. So there has been little reason for Delmarva farmers to lose their relative enthusiasm for soybeans since they indicated their April 1 planting intentions.

The Maryland specialist notes, however, that cash prices for soybeans this spring have been running about $1.50 per bushel less than a year ago. Corn prices are virtually unchanged from 1979 spring levels. So, many Delmarva farmers may still be remembering last year's favorable ratio for soybean prices relative to corn prices.

Finally, the Delmarva peninsula is steadily evolving into one of the major soybean-producing areas in the nation. Records of the Maryland Crop Reporting Service show that Delmarva soybean acreage has increased every year for more than a decade.

In 1969, there were 390.9 thousand acres of soybeans harvested on the Delmarva peninsula. By 1979, this figure had increased to 664 thousand. This year's acreage will probably be nearly double that of 1969.

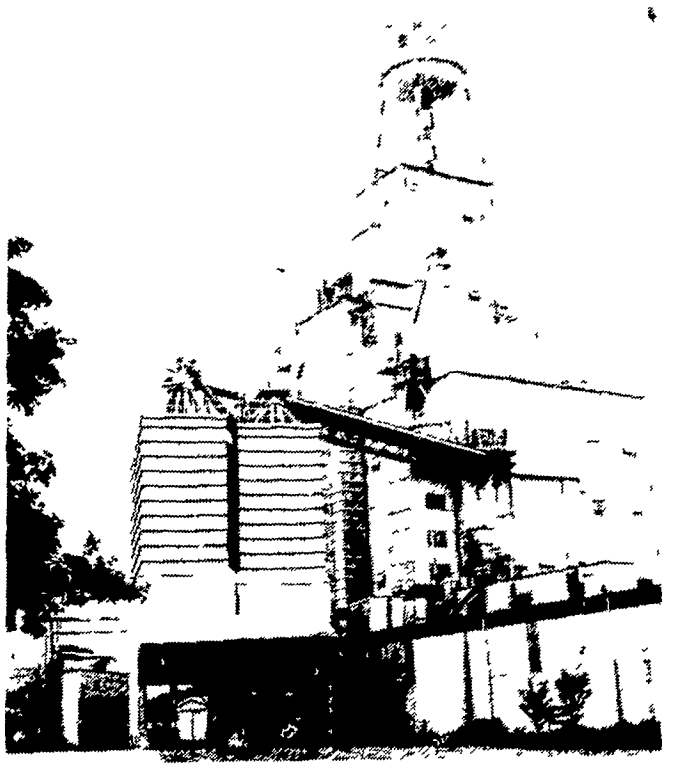
Multi-million dollar plant expansion

SHIREMANSTOWN — The Ralston Purina recently completed a multi-million dollar expansion and renovation at its Harrisburg Chow plant.

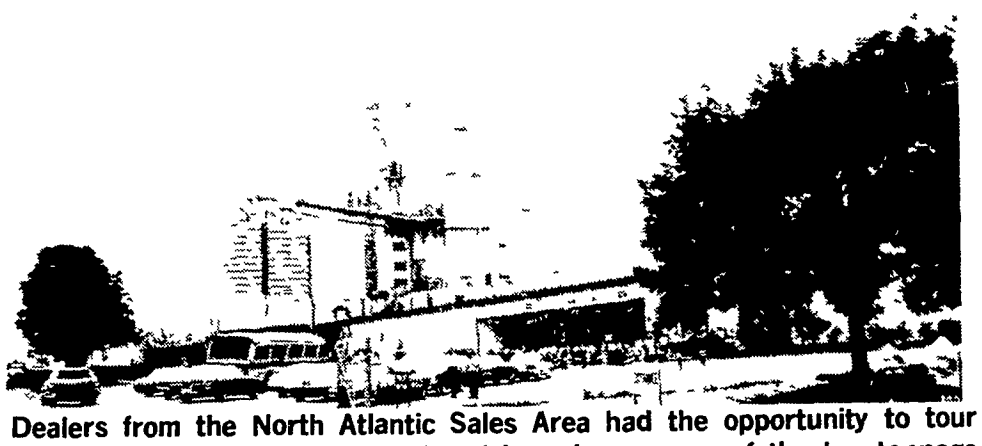
A new Toledo computerized batch mixing system was installed. This new mixing system along with 13 new K-tron feeders, and a program controller now give Harrisburg the capacity to have ingredient accuracy to within one-tenth of a period.

To improve efficiency and insure quality, a completely new grain receiving station was built. A new automatic grain probe was installed and each grain shipment is checked before it is unloaded.

John Zerbe, director of operations at the Harrisburg Chow plant, said the manufacture of high quality feeds with cost efficient computerized milking equipment will allow Harrisburg Chow plant to produce high quality Purina Chows and give value to their Purina customers.



Improved bulk feed loading facilities enables Harrisburg to load two tank trucks at the same time - as many as 200 trucks per day are loaded with Purina Chows bound for poultry and livestock feeders, most of whom are within a 200 mile radius of Harrisburg.



Dealers from the North Atlantic Sales Area had the opportunity to tour Purina's Harrisburg Chow plant. Harrisburg is now one of the top tonnage plants within the Ralston Purina Company — the world's largest manufacturer of livestock and poultry feeds.

Dealers see new machinery

A new series of planters and cultivators were unveiled to Northeastern International Harvester Dealers at the York County Fair Grounds. Included in the opening were the 800-series planters and the 183 cultivator line. Here a number of dealers get their first look at the planter line.

Regional Jr. Angus show to be held at Timonium

WOODBINE, Md. — Young cattle breeders from all over the East will be exhibiting their Angus cattle at the Maryland State Fairgrounds in Timonium on July 5.

The show is sponsored by the Northeast Junior Angus Association and has been designated the "Star Spangled Classic", in honor of the date and proximity to the Star Spangled City.

There have been 141 heifers entered from Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Connecticut and Rhode Island. Judge is Gary Minish of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The show will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Cow Palace. The public is invited to watch. There is no admission charge and lunch will be available on the grounds.

Honored as Broiler Industryman of the Year is H. Earl Gingrich, at left, Hummelstown, Dauphin County, who retired in May from the Pennfield Corporation. Making presentation is Ken Longacre, of Franconia, last year's winner.

Poultry Industrymen

in poultry husbandry, he took his first job with a feed company in Chicago.

Later, he returned to Pennsylvania to work for Miller's Limestone Quarry and subsequently Ziegler Brothers Feed Company in Gardners, Adams County.

Farming was still in his blood because in 1951 he started in the broiler and turkey business. In 1956, he added layers and gradually switched over entirely to this phase of poultry operations.

In 1960, he joined D.E. Horn and Company as territory salesman, selling feed to independent broiler, turkey and egg producers. In 1965, he was promoted to Major Account Representative and two years later started servicing all company-owned flocks. In 1971, when Horn and Company merged with Miller and Bushong to become Pennfield Corporation, he was placed in charge of the company's broiler breeder flocks.

Gingrich retired from that post just last month.

Egg Industryman of the Year Leininger bagan farming 28 years ago with his parents. Six years after taking over the family operation, he put up his first chicken house, which was only 14 years ago. In the past decade and a half, the operation has grown tremendously.

The Leiningers farm 800 acres, about 500 in corn. The family team includes wife, Allegra, and sons, David and Mike.

He received the State 4-H Alumni Recognition Award in 1975 and was named a Master Farmer a year later. He is a member of the Reinholds Lions Club, Pennsylvania Farmers Association, the Lancaster County Farm and Home Federation. He is a Past President of the Ephrata Young Farmers Association, the County Poultry Association and the State Poultry Federation.

He will serve as Finance Chairman for the National Young Farmer Educational Institute to be held in Hershey Dec. 5-9.

As Turkey Industryman of the Year, Konhaus moved into operation of the four-generation family farm after high school graduation. He began in dairying and sold milk through a retail outlet. After 15 years in the dairy business, he moved into general farming and a small flock of turkeys.

He grows all of the feed for his present flock of 30,000. His seasonal processing operation is located on the farm just next to the production facilities.

In a particularly bad year, when prices weren't to his liking, he entered the retailing end of operations. He later expanded into other farm products.

Beginning with a small roadside stand, the retail venture now includes three supermarkets in Cumberland County.

Turkey Industryman of the Year honors went to Paul Konhaus, right, Mechanicsburg, Cumberland County, and his wife, Margaret. Making presentation, center, is Emerson Meashey, Dauphin County, last year's honoree.

He is a past president of the Mechanisburg Rotary Club and the Executive Club of Harrisburg. He is a past president of the State Poultry Federation and a past director of the National Turkey Federation. He is also Vice-President of of the First Bank and Trust Company of Mechanicsburg.

Dairy Princess

Carnegie Institute served as the be-all and end-all of Bert Parks during his stint as master of ceremonies

Connie's question for the judges was "How would you describe a cow to someone from outer space who has never seen one." Her answer was a simple explanation of the cow's physical characteristics with particular emphasis on the milk she produces.

Other contestants in the evening's competition were: Robin Balmer, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs Henry Balmer, Lampeter; Lyndell Martin, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Martin and Karen Schmuck, 17, daughter of Dr and Mrs Larry Schmuck, Peach Bottom.

Outgoing Dairy Princess, Lucinda Landis was honored with several standing ovations by the crowd for her work during the past year promoting dairy products.

Barb and Earl Stauffer were additionally awarded a handpainted butter churn for their work as chairpersons of the pageant their seedbeds or who have tobacco fields near those of a neighbor known to be infected.

"Thus far, the weather has been a big plus," Lueck said.

"This week's hot, dry weather has been in our favor and has held down any spread of the fungus."

But both Lueck and Yocum expressed concern should the weather make a turn for the worst to cloudy, cooler and damp conditions.

Numerous reports of the mold moving from seedbeds to fields were coming into the Extension Office on Friday, Lueck said.

"It has developed rapidly in the seedbeds in spite of control spraying," he said.

"We have instances of it attacking large plants, some 18 inches across. Fields close to active seedbeds are particularly susceptible. It's vital to get rid of those seed beds as soon as transplanting is completed."

It is estimated that about 80 percent of the tobacco transplanting is completed. This puts some county growers a bit behind their normal schedule.

Early transplanted tobacco is looking good, according to Lueck, particularly with the hot, sunny weather. Problems are arising with the late transplantings.

Seed bed problems with blue mold have been attributed to the lack of a regular and effective spraying program in the beds.

In neighboring Maryland, blue mold has been found in the fields of St. Mary's and Calvert counties.

"We are not certain what we are dealing with," said Claude McKee, extension tobacco specialist and agronomist at the University of Maryland.

"It is definitely blue mold, but some of the symptoms are different from blue mold that we saw before 1979.

"In some fields in St. Mary's county, the disease had gone systemic (affecting the entire plant), but farmers said they could not see it in the beds."

Field spraying has been recommended in Maryland, too.

It is also possible that growers may be encountering a new strain of the fungus, McKee added.—DA

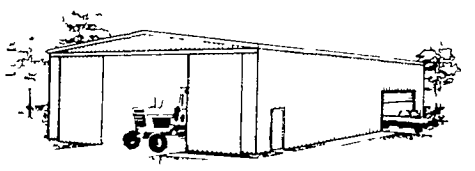
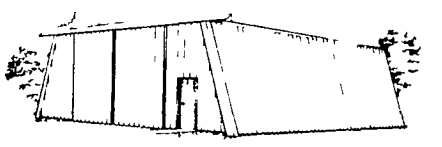
ATTENTION FARMERS! ADVANCED AG SYSTEMS INTRODUCES CIRCLE STEEL BUILDINGS





DO YOU REALLY NEED A STORAGE BUILDING THIS GOOD?

If you could afford a new building every 10 years, a Circle Steel building wouldn't be necessary. But most farmers make an investment in a building that will last longer than 10 years...many are investing in Circle Steel to get that longer life with less yearly maintenance.

If you want long-term return on your building investment, make it a Circle Steel...from

"Harvestall Chillcuring works. I get big energy savings and I don't have to babysit a dryer."

DAN KOLB, Spring City, Pa.

This is my third year with the Harvestall system, and I've found it to be ideal for my setup. I've harvested corn at 30% with no problem. The thing I really like about the Harvestall is that I don't have to babysit a dryer. I can fill it and forget it. Plus there are really no major moving parts to wear out or break down.

"I can cure down 26%-30% corn for around 6¢ to 8¢ a bushel. 24%-25% would run considerably less.

"The way the Harvestall works is simple and effective. As for those who are skeptical, it's like the bumble bee: according to scientists he's not supposed to be able to fly. But he's too dumb to know it, so he flies anyway. So regardless of what anyone says, the Harvestall system works. It works for me and I'm happy with it. I do recommend the Harvestall for its economy and for its considerable savings on energy."

The Harvestall Chillcuring System

It's simple When grain comes out of the field it's a living seed So instead of destroying the seed with high heat, moisture is removed with natural air ventilation The grain keeps all its feed value, there is less shrinkage than with heat drying because only moisture is removed, not dry matter You'll never see white dust in chillcured corn You actually save half of what you're used to losing in heat shrink

There's no oil or gas to buy Natural air carries away heat and moisture as the corn releases it

Harvestall Chillcuring is a "back-to-basics" system that just simply makes good sense Find out more about it

Cattle breeding trends eyed at ABS session

LANCASTER — Trends in cattle breeding were discussed by Dr. Paul D. Miller, Director of Sire Development for American Breeders Service, at a District Annual Banquet at the Landis Valley Motor Inn Tuesday night.

Among the topics touched on by Dr. Miller were future semen production involving bulls on allocation, customer expectations concerning genetic improvement, the future of colored breeds in AI, expansion of young bull testing, and long-range effects of the narrowing of the genetic base.

In addition, Dr. Miller told his audience of service reps primarily from southeastern Pennsylvania that he is seeing yet another increasing trend — the growing incidence of milking three times a day.

"Milking three times a day is resulting in about a 20 percent production increase in herds," he said.

"I recently visited one herd in which there were eight two-year-olds producing more than 140 pounds a day each in their first lactation."

Among service reps honored at annual district banquet of American Breeders Service Tuesday night were, from the left, Ira L. Boyer, Thomasville, York County, five years of service; C. Robert Greider, Bernville, Berks County, five years of service; Darvin Yoder, Ephrata, Lancaster County, top representative for 1979; Maurice C. Stump, West Grove, Chester County, 20 years of service and surpassing the 125,000 total unit volume with 133,711 units; and James N. Charles, Columbia, Lancaster County; surpassing the 50,000-unit level with 51,223 total unit volume. Yoder and his wife, Joan, will receive a trip to the ABS Americana Oct. 1-3.

Dr. Miller explained that the increasing use of embryo transplants has stepped up concentration on the very best bulls whose semen has been on allocation. But he expects the supply situation to improve in the near future. He described semen production recently involving allocated bulls as phenomenal. In some instances production has doubled over the previous six months.

Due to the rapid changes in genetic development, he said dairy farmers are now coming to expect annual production increases of 75 pounds a year.

He went on to explain that most of the construction taking place at AI facilities presently centers on new barns for young bulls being sampled in the sire program. ABS is sampling 130 young bulls this year, which is about 25 more than last year and that number will likely increase next year, Dr. Miller said.

The future of the colored breeds appears mixed. While industry-wide sampling is dropping, probably half of what it was five years ago, ABS sales in the colored lines are increasing at a rate faster than with the Holstein breed. Dr. Miller said ABS will continue its sampling program with the colored breeds.

To realize just how much the genetic base may be narrowing, only a glance at the Sire Directory is necessary. Just count the number of bulls not sired by Elevation, Bootmaker, Chief or Astronaut, Dr. Miller said. It comes out to about 32.

Dr. Miller said he participated in a Dairy Science Symposium on the question of how embryo transplants would further affect the narrowing of the genetic base. A population geneticist was asked to computer simulate a comparison between a broader genetic base versus narrower blood lines in breeding for specific purposes.

The group concluded that there appears to be very little to worry about concerning long-range genetic effects.

He explained that ABS sampling last year of young bulls involved 36 different sires, providing a broad genetic base. But it was still the individual dairyman who makes the decision of which bull is selected, he added.—DA

Fifth in a series of interviews with Glenn Shirk

Dairy employee relations—put yourself in their shoes

BY PAT KAUFFMAN

LANCASTER — Farm labor relations — where to find help and how to keep it — is the topic of this week's interview with Lancaster dairy agent, Glenn Shirk

Glenn, where does a dairyman find good help?

Pat, I think when looking for farm help, some of the best labor a dairyman can find is from his own family There's a tremendous opportunity for a farmer to work with his youth — to get them started Parents must recognize the opportunity to develop good managers, good businessmen in their children by working with them closely.

The dairyman must be careful when working with members of his own family that he doesn't make farm life a life of slavery. He must show respect to the youth and give them the opportunity to gradually work into a share of the business or to make management decisions.

This can work whether the youth's future might be to gradually work into the farming operation and a transfer, whether he's equipping the youth to start out on his own in farming or whether he's training the youth for off-farm opportunities.

Dairy farmers must recognize their opportunity to approach two concerns at once: the need for extra help and the need to build strong kids, mentally as well as physically

Next where feasible, partnerships are one of the best methods for smaller operations to obtain the help they need. The advantage here is when you're a part of the business, the business then becomes your business and you give more of yourself to it This is also the advantage of the family farm over the corporate structure. Partners tend to work toward the best interests of the business

A partnership does not have to be made up of family members. A partnership could be a joint farming venture of two unrelated parties What is necessary is to be sure that the two partners are compatible The two people must share the same dream

We've looked at the possibility of getting extra help from within the dairyman's family or through partnership agreements What about other sources?

When a dairyman looks for help he must first know what he's looking for, Pat

There are several categories in farm work There are critical jobs which require a sharp mind and the ability to make the right decisions Milking and feeding the cows, the duties of a herdsman, fall into that category For this job the dairyman needs someone with good experience or who is trainable.

There's another category of farm employee that is basically just a laborer with little expertise required If what the dairyman needs is someone to finish the baling while he milks, to take the pressure off during seasonal jobs, then this would be the right category to hire

Perhaps in a small operation in order to free himself temporarily from the day-to-day milking chores, a dairyman could hire relief milkers In this area, there's a great need for relief milkers Often in their place, informal agreements between neighbors with very little money changing hands are used

Relief milkers are particularly good during periods of sickness, hunting seasons and vacation Often farmers are reluctant to pay the going rate for this service But farmers need to remember that it is often less expensive in the long run to use extra help wisely than to tie themselves down to a schedule which allows insufficient time to properly manage the business or for a badly needed vacation

When using custom milkers, it's best if the milkers get acclimated to the herd before the necessary time Often the presence of someone new is disquieting to the herd

The relief milker needs to know any special feeding, treatment or breeding information He needs to know the equipment serviceman, the vet, who to call for breeding service on cows scheduled to come in heat and the sires to use, and location of controls such as a generator in the event of a power failure

When looking for workers a dairyman should not overlook women Women are suited very well to many jobs on the dairy farm Their patience is conducive to good cow-calf raising results

Once a dairyman has found a herdsman or dairy employee, Glenn, how does he keep him?

Probably the most important point here is to be a good people manager This means putting himself in his employee's shoes It means working with his employee in a businesslike manner and appreciating his feelings

Workers appreciate a boss getting his hands dirty and sweating right along with them A dairyman must be able to bring himself to his employees' level and occasionally bring them up to his

Above all the dairyman must remember that his herdsman is a skilled employee and that the success of his operation can depend on him He must hire someone capable of making sound decisions and pay him enough to make a good living

In next week's column we'll continue with a discussion on good employer/employee relation practices

Local Farm Credit office announces interest drop

LANCASTER — The Federal Land Bank Association of Lancaster announced a drop this week in the amount of interest charged on its variable rate mortgages. Made possible by improved market conditions, the move will benefit current member/borrowers as well as those with pending contracts.

According to Association General Manager Carl A Brown, the area's largest agricultural lender will lower its interest rate from 12 percent to 11 percent effective July 1. In addition, some of the Land Bank's loan closing fees will be lowered.

In conjunction with this drop in Land Bank interest rates, Brown said that the Lancaster Production Credit Association will drop its interest rate by one-half percent on July 1

That brings the total reductionof PCA loan rates since June 1 to 1.5 percent.

Brown expressed pleasure with the interest and fee actions and expressed deep satisfaction that the cooperative credit system had managed to keep rates from going even higher in recent months.

"The Land Bank obtains funds through the sale of investment bonds," he explained. "Even though the price of those bonds went as high as 17 percent at one point, it is a tribute to our cooperative that we were able, this time, to keep our member's interest rate from going any higher," he added

Brown went on to say that the 11 percent interest rate was still high and represented a strain on local farmers already burdened with spiraling costs and depressed prices "But," he stressed, "it is a step in the right direction." Brown was unwilling to speculate on future rate changes but pointed with some optimism to recent downward shifts in the bond market as hopeful indicators

"I believe recent events have demonstrated that a cooperative lending institution which is owned by its members can run efficiently, compete effectively, and serve the agricultural community well," Brown said.

Hog numbers increase

HARRISBURG — There were 920,000 hogs and pigs on Pennsylvania farms on June 1, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service This inventory was up six percent from December 1, 1979 and 12 percent from June 1, 1979.

Breeding stock at 132,000 was up 19 percent from last year and market hogs at 788,000 were up 11 percent The spring (December 1979 - May 1980) pig crop of 653,000 pigs was up nine percent from last year's spring crop of 600,000. There were 87,000 sows farrowed with an average of 7.5 pigs per litter. Keystone farmers intend to farrow 80,000 sows during the fall of 1980.

Nationally, inventory of hogs and pigs was estimated at 65.9 million head, one percent above last year, 19 percent larger than 1978 and the largest June 1 inventory of record. Breeding inventory at 9.53 million head, was eight percent less than a year ago, but seven percent above two years earlier. Market hog inventory at 56.4 millionhead was three percent larger than 1979 and 22 percent greater than 1978. United States hog producers intend to farrow 6 72 million sows during the June-November period, a decrease of eight percent from the same period last year but five percent above 1978

We Salute The Dairy Farmer During June Dairy Month

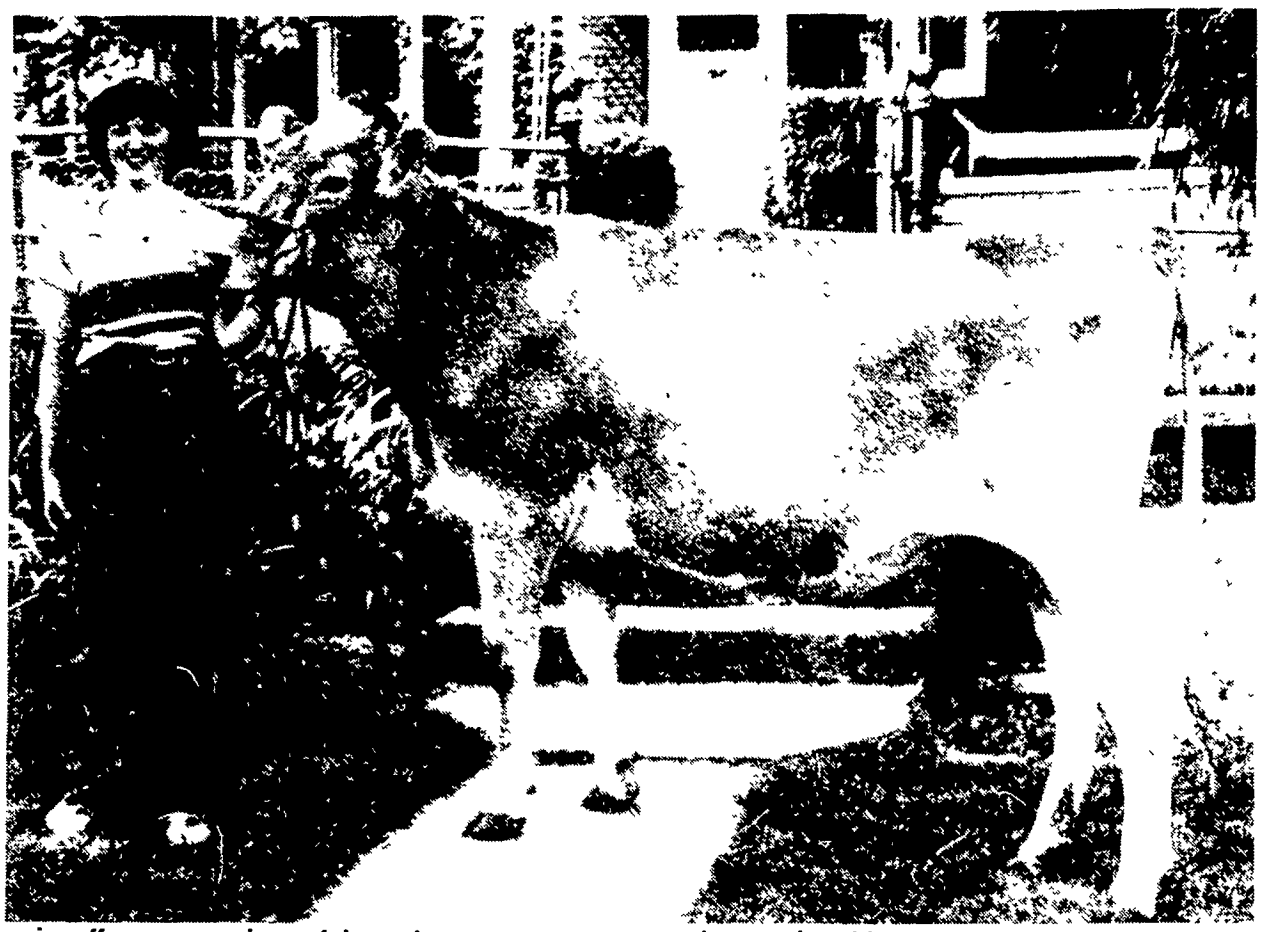
Lancaster's dairy princess sparkles

BY PAT KAUFFMAN

LITITZ — Sparkle. Connie Balmer, the newly crowned 1980 Lancaster County Dairy Princess should add lots of it to her reign. Her dark eyes sparkle at the talk of meeting people and going places.

Connie is the 17 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Balmer, Millway Road, Lititz. With her crowning Saturday evening, she becomes the representative of the Lancaster County dairy industry for 1980-81.

Nancy and Jesse Balmer joined their daughter Saturday evening for pictures.



Connie offers a preview of her show animal, Gordline's Choice Carol which she will show in the county roundup this year.

Connie Balmer, Lititz, the new 1980 Dairy Princess is flanked by Belle Balmer, Mount Joy, first runnerup, left and Lu Ann Brenneman, Mount Joy, second runnerup.

Some of the many gifts Connie received Saturday are shown: bracelets, traveling alarm clock, pocket mirror, umbrella, cow creamer, and tote bag as well as her pewter bowl for Miss Congeniality

This has been a big year for Connie. She's a 1980 grad of Warwick High School. And prior to winning the pageant, she was planning to seek employment in an accounting or secretarial job. But Saturday evening changed all that. Now she's planning to devote a large portion of her time to the dairy industry.

Her personality not only impressed the judges, it also impressed the contestants. Connie was also chosen Miss Congeniality Saturday, an award which is becoming old hat in her household. Seems her sisters Cindy and Cheryl who have also participated in the pageant have been recipients of the award.

Connie's home farm just outside Lititz is also home for 150 head of registered Guernsey cattle of all sizes The family milks approximately 80 cows. Connie and her mother, Nancy regularly help with the milking. And when the men are out doing the haying, the ladies take charge of the cows.

This young lady hasn't been sitting around for the past few years. In addition to her farm responsibilities, she has found time to be in the 4-H Guernsey club for 9 years She has served as secretary and news reporter for the club and is presently its vice-president.

A 4-H sewing club for 5 years and church youth involvement as well as Thursday evening roller skating have helped to fill her hours She also played trumpet in the Warwick bands and orchestra

Her love of her breed comes to the front when she talks of her show calves It seems this young woman has had the Grand Champion Guernsey for the past three years at the county roundup And last year in addition to having the Grand Champion, she also exhibited the Reserve Grand Champion, a daughter of her Grand Champion

In total, Connie owns 7 Guernsey heifers and cows Her father who farms 120 acres on the home farm plus rented land has given the animals to her as well as to the other children in the family This year Connie is planning to hit the show ring with a new project animal, a senior yearling heifer

Connie's Grand Champion cow received an award from Pennfield for her 1979 production of 16,743 pounds of milk and 759 pounds of butterfat In addition, she was the second high butterfat award winning cow in the Ephrata Fair last year Connie's cow was topped by her sister's cow in this competition

Her love and expertise in showing have won for her numerous awards in showmanship over the past few years She has shown in the County, District, Junior Dairy and All American shows Connie said it's the "challenge to train animals and the fellowship at shows" that she loves about showing

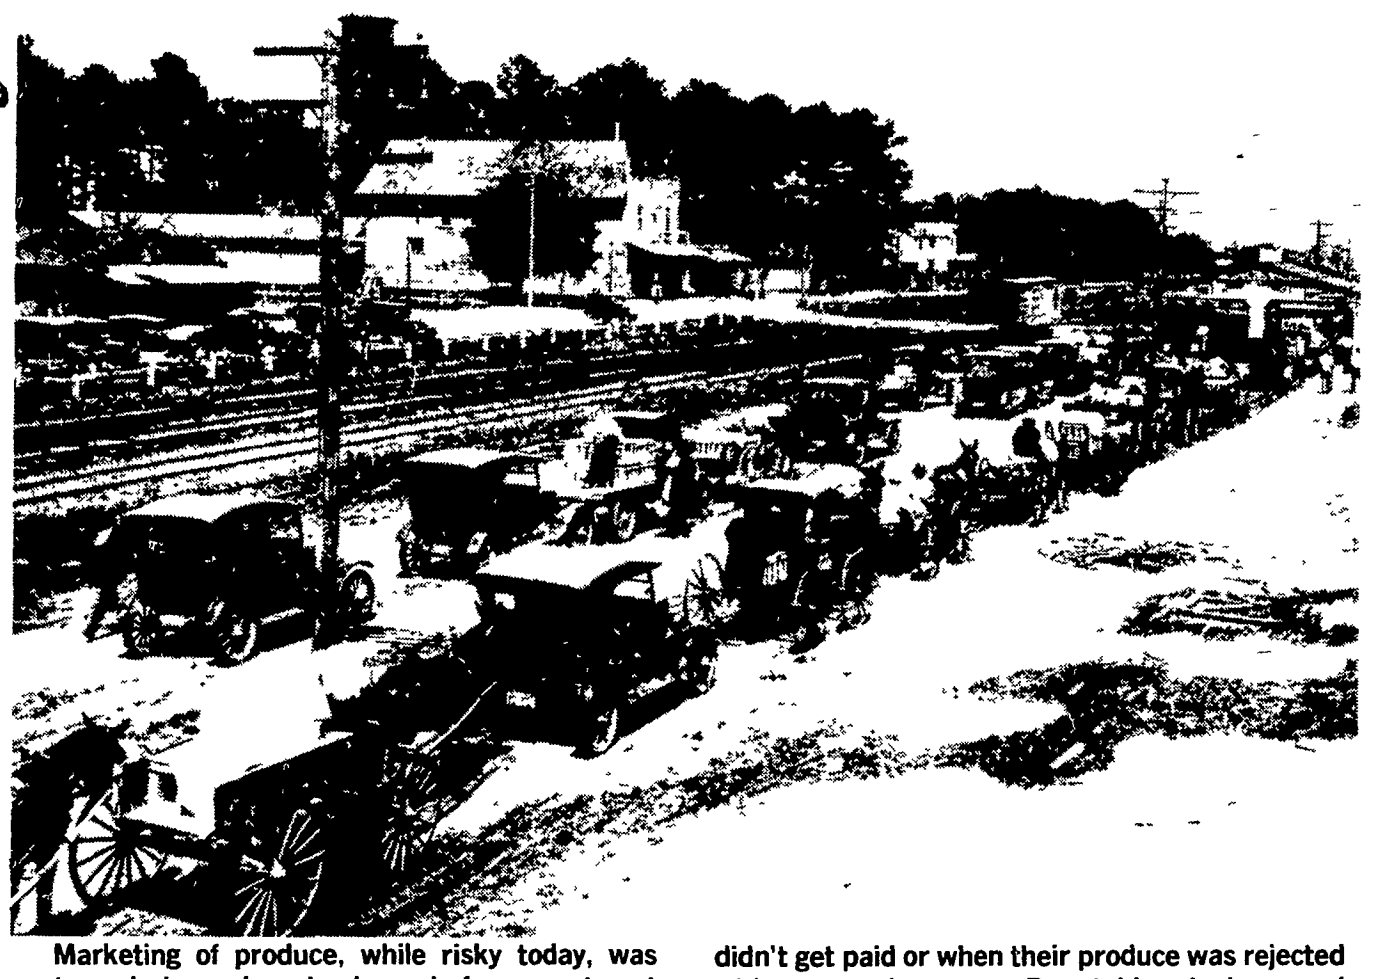
In her 4-H Guernsey club, Connie said she thinks the activities planned are interesting She said that she'd like to see more involvement from the younger members of the club

During the competition Saturday, the girls gave short presentations Connie's presentation was the following rhyme

Out in the meadow so beautiful and green,
Stands Bessy the cow, she thinks she's a queen
She is much entitled to feel this way,
Since she gives good rich milk, which we need every day

(Turn to Page A31)

Connie is no stranger to the dairy industry. While she'll be doing a lot up front for the industry this year, here she shows a working knowledge of the other end.



Marketing of produce, while risky today, was extremely hazardous business before enactment of the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act in 1930. Farmers like these North Carolina strawberry growers had little recourse when they didn't get paid or when their produce was rejected without good cause. Reputable dealers and growers supported idea of fair trading rules that would apply to everyone.

PACA marks 50 years of helping farmers get paid

NEW YORK, N.Y. — When produce marketing went the way of this country's technological and transportation revolution more than a half-century ago, farmers encountered new risks.

One was getting paid for the fruits of their labors.

Dealing directly with local buyers and consumers became a thing of the past. Long-distance, commercial trading became the new thing, and farmers found they had little recourse when buyers didn't pay them or rejected their produce without good cause.

In 1930 — fifty years ago this year — Congress responded to the need of growers and other traders for a code of fair play by passing the Perishable Agricultural Commodities Act.

Congress asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture to administer the law, and today that task is carried out by the Fruit and Vegetable Division of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

"The law has been a good one, and in fact has gotten better as time goes on," said P.R. smith, assistant secretary of agriculture for marketing and transportation services. "Legislative amendments have kept it up to date with current marketing practices in the produce industry."

"Our PACA representatives today service 173,000 farmers and 85,000 others who deal in produce, including retailers."

PACA provides the mechanism, through a system of counseling and enforcement of contracts, to settle trade disputes promptly and recover payments owed so that each load of produce can move through marketing channels and on to consumers quickly.

"Anyone seeking advice on how to avoid specific contract problems with fruit and vegetable purchases or sales can call a regional hotline," Smith explained. "Our PACA representatives answer about 25,000 calls a year from people in the produce industry and counsel them on how to steer clear of business problems.

"When problems occur, PACA representatives on request will go to work on a complaint and help all parties to a contract recover what is rightly theirs."

The assistant secretary said about 75 percent of the 3000 specific complaints that the PACA representatives handle each year are settled informally, recovering about $8 million for those in the produce industry. A formal complaint procedure is used for more serious cases, with all parties to the complaint submitting evidence.

Smith said a licensing system, now being automated for more ef-

Her milk is good for people of all ages,
And affordable to those who earn high or low wages,
It's a delicious drink and nutritious too,
That's why milk's the best for me and you.

It builds strong white teeth and a nice physique,
It surely helps you feel unique.
So drink milk today from Bessy the cow,
It will help you feel happier and healthier, right now.

Connie is especially looking forward to choosing her first-place wardrobe gift and to attending the fair parades and handing out ribbons at the shows.

If anything worries her about the coming year, she said writing all those speeches was a little unsettling. But it's obvious to the visitor that she has nothing to fear. All she has to do is smile.

11' Transport Width. The Flex 90B will follow inside most tractors with dual wheels, making it easy and safe to go from field to field. through narrow gates and over narrow bridges You can have peace of mind regardless of who is at the wheel! Takes less storage space also! The narrow transport width is made possible because the heavy wings pivot 16" inside the base gangs' outer disc. This design feature also contributes to the 90B's plowing ability. The heavy wing structures provide the weight needed to make wings penetrate like the center frame gangs This allows the wings to "flex-up" without lifting the center unit when the inside wing gang strikes a rock or stump, thus reducing shock loads to all components The Flex 90B is designed to save you money in the field and on the road

Dauphin sets dairy meeting

MIDDLETOWN — Ronald Buffington of Select Sires, Inc., Plain City, Ohio, will be guest speaker for the Dauphin County Holstein Twilight meeting on Monday, July 7, 1980, at 7:30 p.m. according to John P. Harris, Dauphin County Ag Agent.

The meeting will be held at the Ray and Dale Kennedy Farm, Middletown.

A judging contest will be held with Ron Buffington as the official judge. Buffington will follow with a discussion on corrective mating of dairy cattle.

This meeting is open to the public.

ficiency, was set up by the law in 1930.

"Licenses help enforcement since a licensee can lose eligibility to operate in the interstate or foreign produce business for a pattern of violations," he said. "A film has to clear up its undesirable business activities if it wishes to stay in or re-enter the produce industry."

About 16,000 commission merchants, dealers, and brokers are currently licensed, and the fees pay the cost of administering the PACA program. Smith said farmers who sell only produce they have raised don't need a license, but they are free to file complaints as others may do when they have been unfairly treated in a contract agreement.

Smith said the PACA representatives encourage written contracts to avoid the risk of later disputes.

"It's also wise for anyone to check the buyer's financial status and reputation before agreeing to ship produce to the person and to keep a record of all transactions," he said. "And it's important to have the produce checked by federal-state inspectors to insure that it meets the quality specified in the contract."

Like farming itself, the business side of produce will always have its share of risks. But Smith said the PACA Act has served well in reducing the risks and taking the $50 billion produce industry a long way since legislators a half century ago used words like "unscrupulous, exploitation, and robbery" to describe conditions before PACA was enacted.

The Eastern states PACA hotlines are: New York, N.Y. — (212) 732-3193 (long distance) or 264-1118 (local). Washington, D.C. — (202) 737-4118 (long distance) or 447-3212 (local).

Seven ag apprentices named in Maryland

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Seven young Marylanders will have the chance to be involved in real university research this summer under the University of Maryland College of Agriculture Research Apprenticeship Program for Minority High School Students.

Each of the students has been identified by the school guidance counselor as having an interest in science and being in the upper fourth of the junior class at Eleanor Roosevelt High School in Greenbelt. This school is the science and technology center for qualified students throughout Prince George's County.

Each of the students will be involved in scientific research projects going on at the University of Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station in College Park.

The program is scheduled to cover the ten week period of June 23 to August 28, and the program supervisor will check frequently to make sure that the learning objectives are being met. At an assembly on the first day, the students will have an opportunity to meet Dr. Earl Brown, dean of the College of Agriculture and other officers on the College Park Campus.

The seven students and their areas of research interest are: Michael Black, agronomy; John Austin, animal science; John Jackson, dairy science; Paul Young, entomology; Patricia Hsiao, food science; Lenora Roberts, horticulture; and Adrienne Twyman, poultry science.

Ag Department to run toll-free produce hotline

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania's farmers can now take advantage of a toll-free telephone service which will provide information on current retail price ranges for fresh produce, according to State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell.

Hallowell said the new telephone service (1/800-932-0904) began Monday, and will remain in operation 24 hours a day, seven days a week, through the fall growing season.

The Produce Marketers Hotline is part of the Agriculture Department's effort to improve farm marketing in the state.

Hallowell said, "We hope that farmers involved in direct marketing will take advantage of this information to assist them in determining their pricing. Greater stability in pricing and supplies should enhance the orderly marketing of fresh farm produce."

The toll-free service is a pilot project, co-funded by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture with $5346 in matching funds from the Agriculture Marketing Service of the United States Department of Agriculture. Taped information on supplies, availability and price ranges for fresh produce will be updated each Monday afternoon and Thursday morning.

Initially, the information will include such early crops as strawberries, sugar peas, snap beans, leaf lettuce, onions, spinach and cabbage. Through the summer and fall other fresh crops such as sweet corn, peaches, tomatoes, peppers, melons, fruits and berries, potatoes and squash will be detailed as they become available for fresh market, according to John W. Scott, Chief of the Department's Marketing Services Division.

Scott said the entire fresh produce industry can be the beneficiary of this pilot project. He noted that if successful, it could become a permanent service of the Bureau of Markets for direct farm marketers at a minimal cost to the Commonwealth.

More information on the toll-free Produce Marketers Hotline can be obtained by writing the Division of Marketing Services, Bureau of Markets, 2301 North Cameron Street, Harrisburg, PA 17110, or by calling 717-787-4210.

Poor turn out for storm water hearings surprises DER

READING — A total of 8 people turned out for the public hearings on the state's proposed index of watersheds for storm water management.

Two meetings, here, at the Penn State Commonwealth Campus, at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. on Thursday found 5 representatives present to voice their concerns and opinions about the proposed plans.

Just two days before the Berks session, another meeting in the state was held at the DuBois Campus where a total of 3 people attended.

Those 5 who did show up for the Berks afternoon meeting represented the Berks Co. Planning Commission, the Berks Co. Conservation District, and the Montour Co. Commissioners.

According to Eugene E. Counsil, Chief of the Division of Storm Water Management in the Department of Environmental Resources, his division didn't know what to expect in the line of public attendance

"These two hearings follow a series of four held recently to review the storm water guidelines. It's not too controversial a topic. And, we had met directly with 36 counties throughout the Commonwealth prior to the hearings," Counsil said.

However, Counsil admitted he was surprised at the light turnout, actually no turn out at the June 26 evening meeting.

The Storm Water Chief said his office has already received some written comments on the proposed watershed areas, and that the comment period is still open until July 3.

After that deadline, Counsil said the comments will be incorporated in the final watershed plan and submitted to the Environmental Quality Board on July 15 for adoption probably sometime in September.

Counsil pointed out the storm water management guidelines have already been submitted to the governor's office, and are waiting to be passed by each house.

Also in the governor's office, he said, are the financial assistance regulations which documents provisions for reimbursing counties for bookkeeping costs.

Once the storm water plans are adopted statewide, individual counties can voluntarily start up their own programs, Counsil added. The storm water plans and local regulations then will have an impact on everybody who engages in activities that increase the runoff characteristics of a watershed, he explained.

Counsil added the county governments will begin the process by studying the scope of their runoff problems in relation to land use. In an agriculturally important area, he noted, controlling soil erosion and nonpoint source pollution, covered by other laws, would mean compliance with the plan.

"Where the problem comes in," he said, "is when the farms are sold for development. Or if there is a drastic change in management that suddenly increases the water pouring off crop fields."

One area where the new law will help farmers, Counsil said, is in preventing developments and road construction crews from dumping their water into farmers' fields.

Of course, there is one little catch. Although the law says that all public works should perform their work consistent with the watershed plan, state agencies—like Penn DOT—are not subject to local laws.

"That's going to be a big problem," stated Counsil. "I suppose there will have to be followthrough by DER if local governments need an advocate when dealing with other state agencies.

He added, however, that in the past 2 years, the attitudes in Penn DOT have been changing. "They are more sensitive to their drainage once it leaves the highway. So, I don't foresee too many problems."

Counsil noted that Gene Hoffman, of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, and Ed Keener, the engineer for the City of Lebanon and a member of the County Conservation District, have worked closely with DER in preparing the storm water management guidelines and watershed designations.

"Once the guidelines are approved by the legislature and the watersheds are approved by the EQB, the law calls for counties to complete their own plans within 2 years," Counsil said.

He pointed out, however, that DER plans to grant time extensions if needed based on individual county request.

"Under the present policy, DER is not going to seek enforcement action if there are delays."

In closing, Counsil emphasized the storm water plan is not a land use control program. "We may identify needed changes, but as long as the storm water is controlled, the desired land use is still possible."—SM

Myers named associate agent

UNIVERSITY PARK — Clyde A. B. Myers, assistant Berks County Extension agent on Penn State's extension service staff, has been promoted to the rank of associate extension agent, effective July 1.

Thomas B. King, Penn State associate dean for extension, who announced the promotion, said that an internal rank system provides recognition for extension staff members who are conducting outstanding educational programs.

Myers is conducting educational programs primarily in the area of animal science, and related youth activities. He was appointed to the Berks County staff in 1977.

A native of Dover, he received a bachelor of science degree in animal husbandry from the Delaware Valley College of Science and Agriculture in 1972 and master of science degree from Penn State.

Prior to his appointment to the Extension staff, Myers was an agriculture instructor in the Red Lion Senior High School. In 1975, he was named Teacher of the Year by the York County Conservation District.

He is a member of Delta Tau Alpha, agricultural honor society.

State sets record spring turkey harvest

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania game protectors indicate that the harvest of turkey gobblers during the spring season - this year broke all previous records. Spring gobbler seasons have been held in Pennsylvania annually since 1968.

The 1980 harvest of bearded birds was almost a third higher than the figure for 1979, and that harvest was almost a third more gobblers than were taken in 1978.

The figure for the spring harvest this year was put at 3,716 by game protectors. This compares with 2,836 in 1979 and 2,128 in 1978.

Game Commission studies show the number of birds which game protectors report is only about one-third of the actual harvest Many hunters take their birds at the crack of dawn or shortly thereafter as the gobblers are coming off the roost, and the hunters generally reach home with their turkeys without being seen by a game protector

The largest number of birds harvested this spring, 1426, came from the northcentral part of the state. This figure, which is an all-time record for the northcentral area, is more birds than were taken in the entire state during the 1971 spring season.

Milk security clears one hurdle, faces others

BY CURT HARLER

HARRISBURG — Three of four major farm groups involved in pushing for a milk security fund restated their support for the present fund bill as written.

And the House Agriculture Committee, before approving the measure, overwhelmingly defeated a proposal which would have changed the proposed one cent per hundredweight contribution by dealers to two cents.

But the state Association of Milk Dealers Thursday discovered what may be a major oversight in the bill as written. Correcting it will require some revision of the bill.

As written, SB 1287 repeals Section 5 of the Milk Marketing Act. One part of the Section established provisions for sub-dealer bonding. Sub-dealers are those who buy milk from dairies to sell on their own as cheese or butter.

At least 175 sub-dealers are missed in the current draft, to the tune of $105,000 in bond revenue.

Meantime, a legislative memorandum signed by Leonard Zemaitis, Pennsylvania Farmers' Union; Charles Wismer, Master of the State Grange; and Charles Ord, representing the six co-ops in the Dairy Cooperative Coalition, was delivered to the House. It calls for speedy passage of SB 1287, the milk security fund bill, as written.

Their move came as Pennsylvania Farmers' Association representatives continued to press for a two cent per hundredweight checkoff.

"Significant modification of this bill will jeopardise passage of the bill," the memorandum to House members said.

It also said those who want and need the security bill would be disturbed if infighting in the farm community spelled the death of the bill in the legislature.

The House Agriculture Committee Friday gave SB 1287 the same speedy treatment accorded the measure in the Senate.

The House Ag Committee defeated by a vote of 13 to 2 a proposed amendment to raise the checkoff to two cents.

Only technical amendments to the bill were permitted.

Even those minor adjustments, let alone changes to include sub-dealer bonding, may cause trouble later on. Any ammendment must be approved by the Senate which already gave SB 1287 its overwhelming support

Supporters of SB 1287 say they fear the battle over the fund may be resumed in the Senate where legislators may be urged to vote non-concurrence with any modifications made in the House.

Last ditch opposition from those opposed to the idea of dealer contributions also could come in the Senate. It could come from the two cent group if they don't get their way in the House, but is also likely from the state milk dealers if the sub-dealer provision is not replaced or if the funding is raised by the House from a penny to two cents.

It must be remembered the dealers all along have opposed a dealer-funded program, demanding some farmer contribution. The bonding may cost even financially sound dairies like Hershey, Abbott's or Penn Dairy as much as $50,000 a year.

Given the short time left on the legislative calendar for passage of bills, such back and forth activity could doom the milk security fund bill to die at the end of the session. Should that be the case the entire long process of making a bill into law would have to be begun again.

Most observers say the legislators will pack up and go home by this Wednesday at the latest, perhaps even by Tuesday.

If the current bill is not sent to the governor by then it is likely it never will become law.

Dairy management movie offered

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Combating clinical and subclinical mastitis, and the production loss mastitis can cause, is a constant challenge to dairymen. To provide front-line support, TUCO, Division of The Upjohn Company, has produced a Quality Milk movie.

Featuring dairy scientists such as Allen Bringe from the University of Wisconsin, Roger Natzke from Cornell University, W. Nelson Philpot from Louisiana State University, as well as others, the movie provides management information, facts and figures that can help dairy producers improve production and milk quality.

Subjects covered include incidence and costs of subclinical and clinical mastitis, the importance of somatic cell count in a quality milk program and instruction on CMT paddle use.

Agway, H.P. Hood deal stalled by Justice Dept.

BY CURT HARLER

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — On Tuesday the board of directors of Agway Cooperative agreed to make a tender offer for about 70 percent of the shares of H.P. Hood common stock.

But the expected sale of Hood assets to the new Agri-Mark Co-op was stalled Thursday pending resolution of financial and contractual questions, according to Hood Vice President Robert Cushman

Also delaying proceedings is word that the U.S Justice Department plans to bring legal action against the formation of the proposed giant New England dairy co-op.

None of the parties had received a copy of the Justice Department complaint as of Friday

An Agri-Mark-Yankee spokesman said everything is in a holding pattern The targed date for completion of the package deal was to be July 1

The Agway stock purchase will give Agway controlling interest of the voting shares of the Hood company

Purchase of the Hood stock by Agway also is pending positive conclusion of studies presently being conducted by the U S Department of Justice

The general plan for formation of the new marketing co-op, Agri-Mark, is to have Agway buy Hood's voting stock.

Meanwhile, the current Yankee Co-op stock is turned over to the newly formed Agri-Mark Co-op Yankee goes out of existence

Agri-Mark, in turn, buys the fixed assets of [illegible] Agri-Mark then will lease the plants and equipment back to Hood Hood agrees to buy all of its milk from Agri-Mark Hood continues to sell under its own name

Agway will have little involvement with Agri-Mark except for owning controlling interest in Hood. But farmers would have control of Agri-Mark both through the Agri-Mark Co-op itself and through Agway's board voting the Hood stock

The price Agway will pay for the Hood stock is about $43 per share

Agway said the recent suspension of patronage dividends to all of its members has nothing to do with the current dairy dealings in New England

Agway said the dividend was suspended to allow the Co-op to build reserves in the present inflationary period

Agway said it expects to borrow all the funds for the purchase of Hood stock, probably through the Bank for Cooperatives

The purchase of the Hood stock is pending, subject to positive conclusion of studies being conducted by the U S Department of Justice

In the meantime, Agri-Mark, Inc has been actively engaged for several weeks in signing up New England farmers to join the new cooperative

The Agri-Mark shippers will pay 94 cents per hundredweight to buy the physical assets of H P Hood

Agway said it was notified by Agri-Mark on Tuesday, June 24, that the amount of milk in pounds of annual production committed to Agri-Mark is approaching the previously reported goal of three billion pounds

R N. Goddard, executive vice president and chief executive officer of Agway, said contingencies to the Agway offer to purchase H P Hood included the need for a sufficient amount of milk to assure successful operation of the system, as well as the committment of New England Farmers

"We believe these contingencies have been met, due in part to the outstanding job done by the field teams," Goddard concluded

Poultry improvement meeting scheduled for July 7-10

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The General Conference Committee of the national poultry improvement plan will meet July 7 to 10 at the Fairmont Hotel in New Orleans, La., to consider 32 proposals affecting poultry producers, a coordinating official with the U S Department of Agriculture said today.

Ray Schar, senior national poultry improvement plan coordinator with USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said the committee meeting will be an integral part of the 25th biennial NPIP conference The seven-member committee is elected by the NPIP conference delegates, who represent poultry industry participants in each state

"The NPIP conference and the committee have provided significant advice to USDA on the procedures, policies and regulations needed to implement the national poultry improvement plan ever since its inception in 1935," Schar said.

The 32 proposals to be considered at this year's meeting range from procedural matters to changes in laboratory testing requirements and regulations for the shipment of hatching eggs and baby poultry There will also be a program proposed for control of Mycoplasma meleagridis, an egg-transmitted disease of turkeys, Shar said

Proposals will be discussed in general session, reviewed by subcommittees, and voted on by the full conference. The general conference committee will then review the conference recommendations, iron out discrepancies, and make final recommendations to USDA.

Conference delegates represent four major poultry breeding groups — egg-type chickens (layers); meat-type chickens (broilers), turkeys, and waterfowl.

Delta marks centennial farm tour

BY PATRICIA A. GREEK
Staff Correspondent

DELTA — The Delta Centennial Celebration kicked off with a bang last Saturday with area farm tours. Over 1000 people rode on tractors and hay wagons to visit six different farms.

First stop on tour #1 was Thompson's Farm Dairy This farm, showed an example of a farm and processing plant together

Owned by David Thompson, the milk produced by the cows is processed in the plant and then sold at their new 'Thompson's Farm Dairy Store". A representative of Jim's Surge, Quarryville, was there to explain how a milking machine worked. ABS breeding service also had a representative there to explain artificial insemination to tourists.

Next stop on the tour was Sleepy Hollow Vegetable Farm Owned by the Mel Fifer Family, this farm features pick-your-own fruits and vegetables. Sleepy Hollow Farm consists of 100 acres of ground

Vegetables grown include sweet corn, strawberries, tomatoes, peppers, cantaloupes, and beans

A hog and beef farm was the last stop on the first tour The Joe Alles Farm has been in his family for 100 years The hog operation consists of raising the baby pigs to about 220 lbs. until they are marketed.

The beef operation consists of mainly raising steers to butcher weight.

On Tour #2, the first stop was S. David Stewart's Stewartridge Farm

Stewart has an outstanding herd of over 100 milking Registered Holsteins. Having the high herd in York County for both milk and fat last year, has enabled him to market some of his young cattle overseas

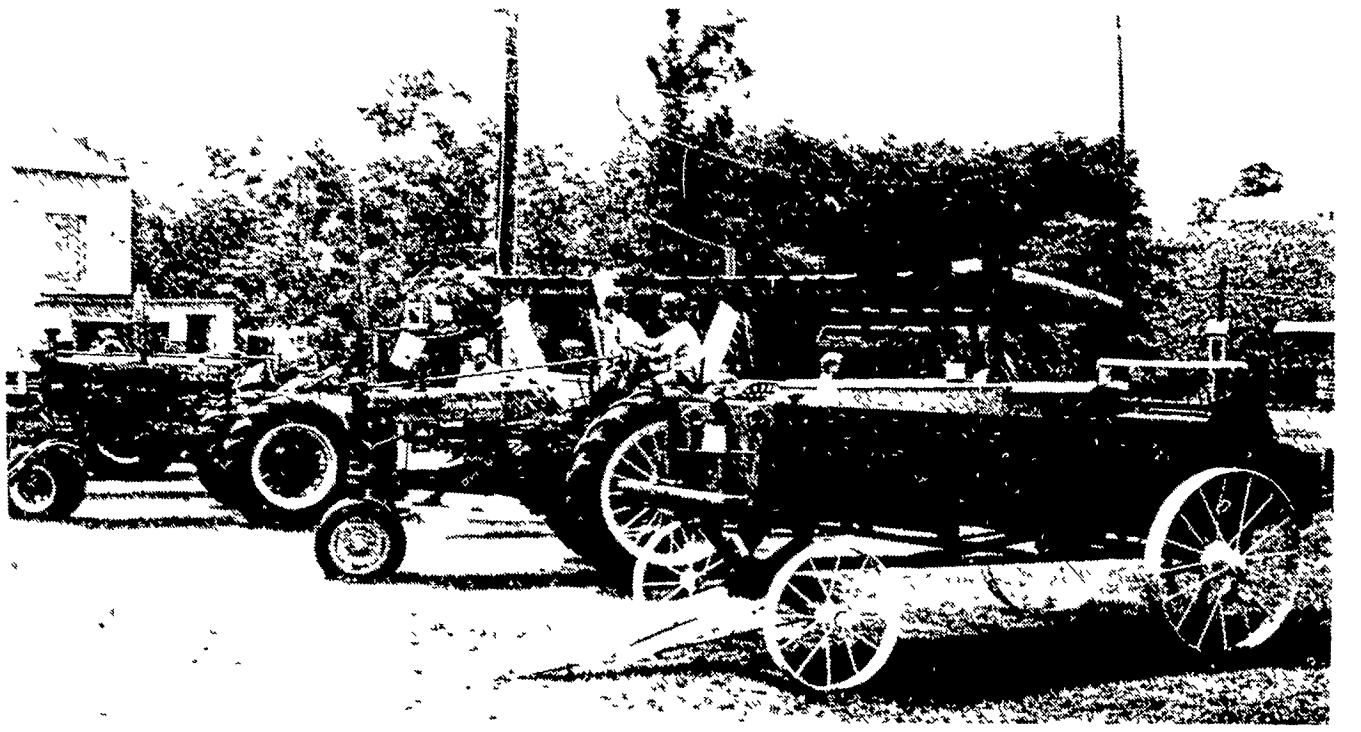
Almost all that the dairy cattle eat is grown on Stewart's 600 acre farm

Susquehanna Orchards, owned by the Cooper Boyd family consists of 6000 fruit trees on 100 acres of and The Boyds raise cherries, peaches, and apples Once an apple tree is planted, it will usually live for 35 to 40 years

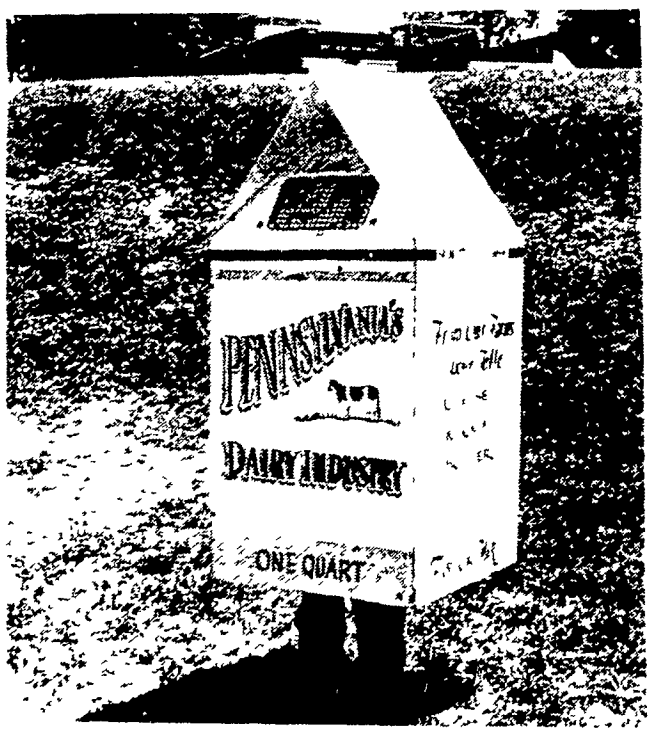
A tour of the orchard was followed by a movie on the production of apples.

The Baldwin Beef and Swiss farm has been in operation for 25 years They raise the hogs up to approximately 220 lbs. before they go to market The Baldwins also have a herd of 30 Angus and Charolais cows

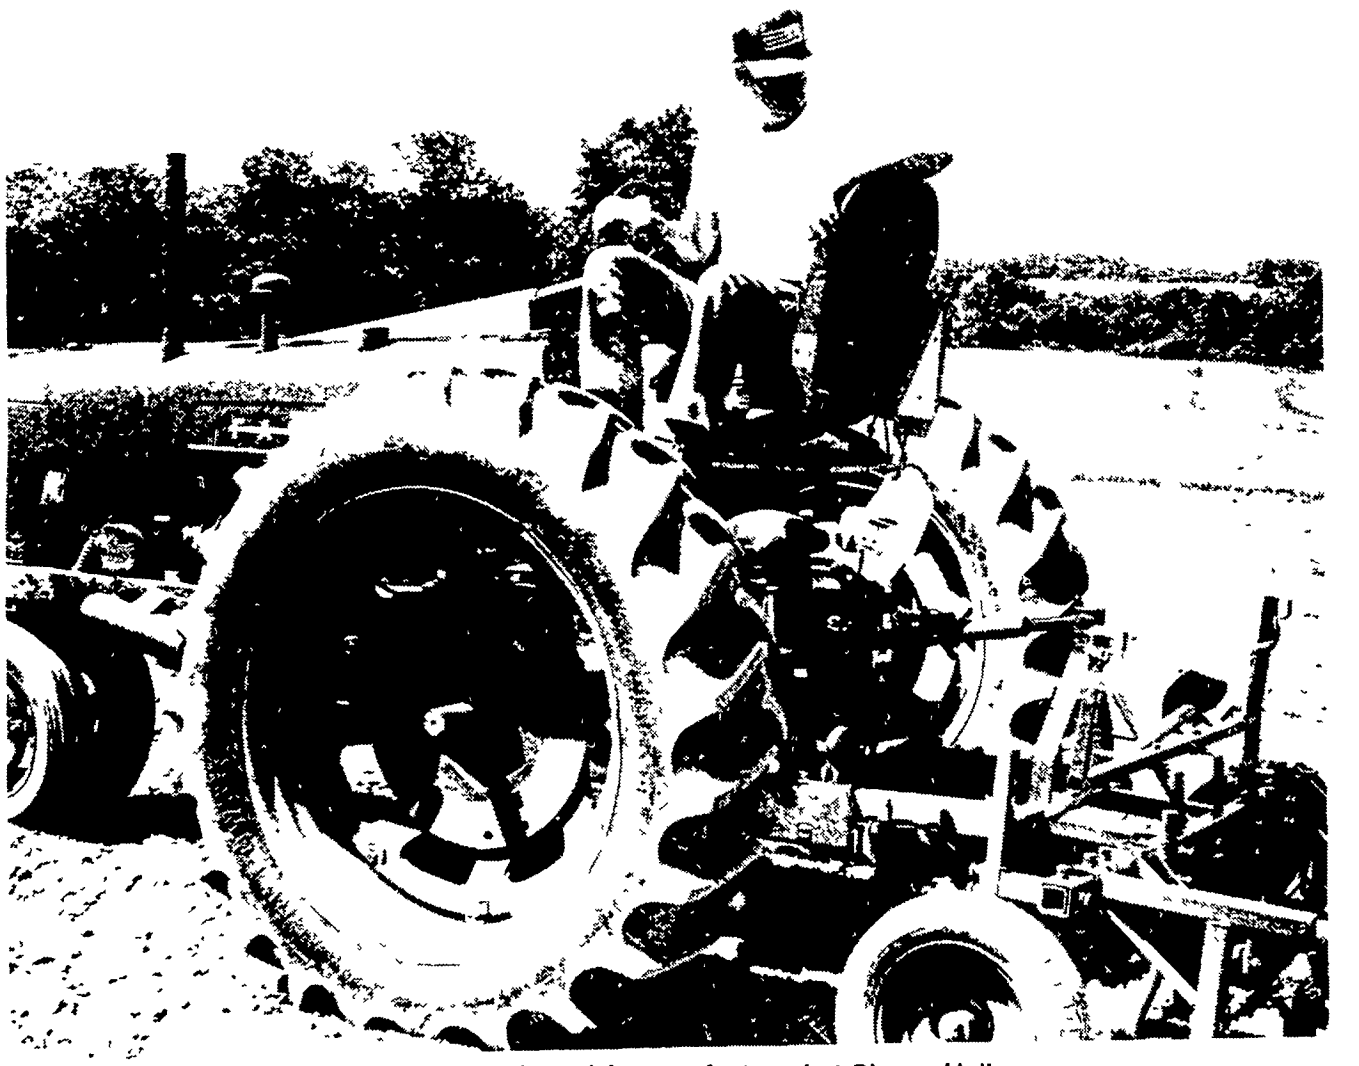
They raise their steers up and sell them locally for butcher The Baldwins have a very old double decker barn, with 2 hay floors plus the stable area below



Antique farm machinery was on display at the Delta Community Center as part of the community Centennial Celebration honoring area farms and farmers.



Marton the Milk Carton walked around at the centennial exhibition.



Demonstration of putting down plastic mulch were featured at Sleepy Hollow Vegetable Farm.

Cooper Boyd, owner of Susquehanna Orchards told visitors about his apple trees and how to take care of them.

David Thompson, owner of farm and plant, at Thompson Dairy Farm and Jean Jones who works in processing plant, explained the in's and outs of dairying.

Juniata crowns dairy princess

Denise Love, was crowned the 1980 Juniata County Dairy Princess by Jackie Stoner, the 1979 Princess, at the Fifth Annual Dairy Princess Pageant on Friday evening, June 20, at the McAlisterville Park. Miss Love, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Love, East Waterford, is 16 years old and will be a Juniata High School Senior this fall. The pageant was sponsored by the Juniata County Holstein Club. George Settlemyer, Juniata County extension director, was the program's Master of Ceremonies.

State Grassland Council seeks new members

HERSHEY — The Pennsylvania Grassland Council, organized in 1960, is conducting its annual drive to enlist farmers interested in forages and pasture improvement.

The purpose of the group, according to dairyman Hershey Bare, R2 Lebanon, is to help improve all phases of Pennsylvania forage and grassland agriculture by collecting, analyzing and disseminating useful information.

In short, the group keeps farmers on top of latest practices in alfalfa and grass production.

In addition, the Council co-sponsors the annual forage workshops These four-day workshops are held in the spring at various locations around the state.

They provide in-depth training for progressive forage and livestock farmers. Seed varieties, fertilization, pesticides, feed and machinery all are discussed at the sessions.

A quarterly newsletter, 'Pennsylvania Grassland News" and the national "Forage and Grassland Progress" are sent to all members

The group is in the vanguard of hay marketing research in the state and is attempting to set standards for both buyers and sellers of Pennsylvania's forage crops.

The Council supports Ag Progress Days and co-sponsors the annual hay and silage competition shows which recognize and stimulate high quality forage production

It co-sponsors the outstanding forage and grassland farmer award program which honors farmers with top grassland farming programs.

There's a $350 scholarship at Penn State sponsored by the group, too.

Bare pointed out the Pennsylvania Grassland Council can only grow and improve the state forage industry with the suport of the state's farmers.

Membership is just $5 a year, he said A lifetime membership is available $100.

For more information if you have a check alre made out to the Grassl Council, write Richard Hann, Secretary Treasu Milton Hershey Sch Farms, Hershey, PA 1703

New milk test

penicillin is found in the milk it is considered violated—no matter how low the level, it's adulterated milk and can't be sold."

When asked what the time element of the new testing methods will entail, Fouse said there is not an appreciable difference between the old method of testing and the new methods. "They still take several hours and can't be done on the farm."

He pointed out the new 'stearo' test requires a different organism, or medium, along with additional equipment.

"The new test requires incubation of the sample plate at a higher temperature. As far as the new organism needed for the test goes, we're concerned the necessary culture may not be available in sufficient quantities by July 1," Fouse said. "There are only two manufacturers of the medium—Disco and Pennicillin Assay, Inc.—and neither of them are based in Pennsylvania."

As a result of the concerns, Fouse said there have been several meetings nationally with the executive board of interstate milk shippers to organize a request to FDA for a deferment in the effective date. He indicated the request to FDA has been made.

"Whether or not the July 1 date will be postponed until more sufficient supplies of the needed culture are available, I'm not in a position to say," Fouse said.

He added that PDA is proceeding under the assumption it will not be changed. On Tuesday, Fouse said he met with 50 laboratory personnel from across the state and reviewed the testing procedure, which he said is not much different than the old method of testing.

One drawback of the test, said Fouse, is that the results are after the fact.

"The universal sample that is taken at the farm to test for milk fat, brucellosis, added water, bacteria, and antibiotics may not show up the drug problems until after the milk has been mixed with milk from other farms in a bulk milk hauler's tanker or even worse in a silo.

"This results in tremendous losses, and the farmer whose sample was in violation receives a stiff penalty—suspension. That's pretty heavy but doesn't compare to the losses when the whole silo has to be thrown out. The producer's lack of care is greatly magnified."

Fouse noted that certain milk cooperatives have established their own controls, and levy monetary fines equivalent to the amount of milk lost. A similar penalty system has been suggested to PDA, he said, but administration would be difficult.

The Milk Sanitation Chief said they have people working on a quick screening test where the results would be ready within 5 minutes, but none have been reliable to date.

What can a producer do to avoid problems? According to Fouse, just being aware of the more sensitive test will be a help.

"Producers will have to be more careful in keeping treated cows' milk out of the bulk tank.

"If one quarter of a cow's udder is being treated for mastitis, none of her milk should be offered for sale Tests show that antibiotics from the treated quarter get into the bloodstream and affect the other quarters.

"We are also concerned that the warning labels on alot of antibiotics do not call for a long enough withholding time, but this has not been confirmed."

If these precautions are followed, Fouse said he felt the new test would not create too many problems for producers.

Milk haulers are concerned that producers on their routes may not share PDA's concern.

One independent hauler said that problem herds will have to be straightened out and the producers educated on the proper use of antibiotics.

Otherwise, he said, there may be hold ups for hours which will really put the haulers behind schedule.

"If the farmer's milk fails the first test, I understand there will be a 4 hour incubation wait until the more sensitive test verifies or discounts the presence of antibiotics. Then if the sample fails, my whole load has to be dumped out in some manure pit."

The hauler added he feels the problem is in the quality control of the testing. "The least variation in methods can make a heck of a difference in the results."

In summing up his feelings, the hauler said a producer is going to have to be " super particular about anitbiotic usage. Routine treatments, like infusing cows to rebreed right away, will have to be cut out—or there'll be a lot of milk dumped at the farm."

The hauler said he felt the producers would see the need to be careful, rather than lose 3 to 4 days of milk production from a cow.

Milk Marketing, Inc. members are already getting a taste of the new, sensitive test. And, according to a spokesman for the Co-op, a lot of the members are "not too happy with the zero treatment tolerance."

He said they are finding more care is required in making sure the cows are getting unmedicated feed, and that when they buy animals, they weren't pumped full of medication. He added the withdrawal time is also proving to be a problem for many producers who need to treat cows.

John Althouse, supervisor of the laboratory at Milk Marketing, explained the Co-op is running the new test along with the old test to work out any transition problems. He commented that the new test does find a few more samples with antibiotics that the old test would have missed.

When asked if he felt this amount of penicillin that is detected by the 'stearo' test (detects amounts to .005-.008 percent of a unit) but was missed by the 'subtilis' test (detects amounts to .05 percent of a unit) was significant for the consumer, he said he doesn't feel the old levels were a problem and that the new test wouldn't do anything for the consumer.

"The new testing will be a problem, especially when all the states begin to enforce the FDA regs, because the spore is hard to get now," Althouse said. "I think that's going to hold things up."

Will FDA grant a deferment because of the appeals from government groups and milk co-ops alike? It looks like producers, manufacturers, co-ops, laboratory personnel, and government officials will have to wait until Tuesday to find out.

Breed, feed, or weed out heifers?

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The long, sharp beef herd liquidation ended last year, and with it the latest cattle cycle. But it's far from certain when the next expansion phase will begin, if it hasn't already, according to USDA's Economics, Statistics, and Cooperatives Service.

That may matter little right now to many producers still trying to regain sound financial footing after the cattle cycle's dizzy, roller-coaster ride of the last few years. However, the pause between liquidation and expansion may be an ideal time to consider how producers can control herd expansion — once it gets underway — and prevent another major downturn like the one that just ended.

The first step toward an answer is trying to figure how much and how fast the cow herd can grow without overexpanding in relation to consumer demand, says ESCS.

With disposable incomes rising in recent years, consumers have been spending more for meat. However, the percentage of income spent on meat has remained fairly stable, averaging 4 to 5 percent. Consumers pick and choose among the red meats and poultry according the price of each, which in the short run depends on the relative supplies of these meats.

Of course, beef supplies aren't determined solely by cattle numbers. Other factors include the proportion of fed cattle, the weight of finished cattle, and the mix of steer and heifer slaughter.

In the long run, however, beef supplies rise and fall with changes in the size of the cow herd — both beef and dairy cows. And cow numbers, in turn, increase or decrease with changes in cattle prices.

This complex, never ending circle of change in demand, supply, and prices can be largely boiled down to one simple and useful ratio: the number of cows per 100 people.

This ratio, indicating the supply-demand balance, has averaged 24.5 cows per 100 people since 1959. (Cow numbers were higher in the early 1950's because of large dairy herds.) A value above 24.5 would tend to indicate an oversupply relative to demand; a lower value, an undersupply.

Multiplying this average ratio by the population gives some idea of the herd size needed for the population level. Historically, during periods when the cow-people ratio was near 24.5, meat and cattle prices were acceptable to consumers and producers alike.

In 1975, the number of cows per 100 people rose to 27 — a 20 year high. And, the price of feeder cattle in constant (1976) dollars fell to its lowest level of the 30-year period.

The cow herd was then liquidated, and the number of cows per 100 people shrank to 22 by the start of 1980. In response, feeder prices — in constant, noninflated dollars — rose toward the level of the early 1970's.

The U.S. population is now about 220 million and is forecast to rise to 241 million by 1990.

Now, assuming that the measuring stick of 24.5 cows per 100 people is a reliable indicator of the supply/demand balance in the 1980's, the cow herd could grow from its present 48 million head to just under 60 million by 1990 without overexpansion. In fact, the cow herd could have been as high as 54 million head at the start of this year (instead of the actual 48 million) without surpassing the stable cow-people ratio of 24.5.

Based on the past herd rebuilding rate and the projected demand for beef, cow numbers could rise to 56 or 57 million by the mid-1980's before reaching the point of overexpansion. Of this total, 10 million would probably be dairy cows (based on projected milk demand).

In the last 3 cattle cycles, overexpansion began in 1953, 1964, and 1973. Right now, ESCS livestock analysts don't expect an overexpansion of the cow herd before 1985. However, by that time it could be too late for producers to prevent excess growth of the cattle herd.

In past cycles, cow numbers continued to increase another year or so beyond that point due to the large number of heifers already being held. The subsequent slaughter of younger cattle and excess breeding stock caused beef production to mushroom, resulting in lower prices and losses to cattle producers.

The key here is to recognize the potential for oversupply well before it is imminent, says ESCS. If cattlemen were to begin culling more cows and holding fewer heifers for herd replacement 1 to 2 years before an expected trigger point, they could slow growth in the cattle herd to match consumer demand for the rest of the decade.

In other words, by no later than 1983, it would be wise to start closely monitoring herd size and the rate at which replacement heifers are entering the herd. Of course, unforseen shifts in consumer demand and productivity per cow could alter the timetable.

For now, producers considering herd expansion face many of the same difficult questions as last summer. For example: Should they sell their replacement heifers now, ensuring a good and immediate return? Or do they want to retain them for their beef cow herd?

Obviously, selling now will produce a quick return. Last year, feeder heifers averaged about $85 a cwt., so a 500-lb. heifers sold for $425 as a feedlot placement. Feeder prices will be about the same or a little lower in 1980

If producers keep their heifers as herd replacements, they will of course forego the immediate return of selling them. But, a heifer retained will probably produce 6 or 7 calves — her own replacement and 5 or 6 calves for sale — plus her value as a cull cow. At current prices, this program would produce annual average receipts of $400 to $450 per brood cow.

Naturally, not all cattle producers are in the same financial situation right now. Many have had a couple of years to reestablish their financial base. Grazing conditions have been mostly favorable, and there's excess grazing capacity in many areas, ESCS points out

On many crop-livestock farms, however, producers quit the cattle business several years ago in favor of cash grain production, with at least part of the pasture converted to crops. Those who got out then are unlikely to get back in now. Such farmers face higher interest costs as well as sharply higher prices of replacement cows — $600 to $800 per head compared with the $200 to $250 they got for their cows a few years ago.

A unit of one bull and 20 cows, excluding replacement heifers, could easily cost $15,000 to $20,000 today. At an annual rate of 15 percent, the interest cost on such a purchase would total around $2,500-equal to the value of 4 or 5 calves

Cattle operators still in business, however, can expand without having to raise a lot of outside capital. Most have owned their land for several years. Even if they have not yet paid off their loans, the interest rates and the price they paid for their land are both well below today's high going prices.

While most cash costs will continue rising, feeder cattle prices are expected to remain high enough to cover them and still provide a return for family labor and management. Once a producer has restored a sound financial base, herd expansion should bring favorable returns for several years, concludes ESCS.

Chianina field day coming

WRIGHTSVILLE — The Northeast Region of the American Chianina Association will be holding the 5th Annual Field Day and Preview Show on Saturday, August 16, announced James Glass, president.

This year's event will once again be held at Lauxmont Farms, Wrightsville, with registration beginning at 8 a.m. and the field day events starting at 9 a.m.

"I want to stress that all 4-H and FFA youth are invited to come and bring their animals with them," Glass said. He added that the field day will be a learning day for all cattlemen, regardless of breed affiliations.

Glass explained that for those youth wishing to bring their heifers and steers to the field day, the following rules apply:

—The Chianina heifers must be accompanied by either an ACA registration certificate or application for registration;

—They must have been calved after January 1, 1979.

—Chianina steers must have been calved during 1979.

—Heifers and steers can be percentage Chianinas, from quarter-blood to full blood.

—There is no entry fee, but the entries are limited to two steers per exhibitor. There are no limits on the heifer entries.

Glass pointed out the prize money for this year's field day is double last year's because of the successful fun auction held in 1979.

The day's events will include a judging contest, for both the individual and county groups, weight guessing contest, and showmanship competition. There will also be a sequel fun auction and a free Chianina roast beef lunch.

Glass said he is hoping to see a good turn out of young people at the field day. He pointed out that last year there were over 800 participants, with 67 weathering the rain to compete in the showmanship contest.

"Come see the Chianinas, and the gentlest bull in the world—Lombard," concluded Glass. He pointed out there were more grand champion Chianina steers nationwide in 1979 than any other breed.

For more information on the field day, contact James E. Glass, 230 Harrison Avenue, Glenside, PA 19038; telephone 215/887-0409.

WE AT PENN-JERSEY WANT DAIRY FARMERS TO KNOW WE CARE AND RECOGNIZE THEIR HARD WORK AND DEVOTION!

HOW IMPORTANT IS AGRICULTURE TO OUR COUNTRY?

NATION'S #1 INDUSTRY

Ag assets are equal to 80% of the capital assets of all manufacturing corporations in the U.S.

NATION'S #1 EMPLOYER

14-17 million people work in some phase of agriculture — 1 out of every 5 jobs in private enterprise.

NATION'S #1 INFLATION FIGHTER

Rate of productivity is double that of non-farm industry. One farm worker supplies today what three workers did 20 years ago.

NATION'S #1 EXPORTER

Ag exports totaled $32 billion in 1979 — by far the leading factor in the U.S. balance of trade. We have less than 7% of the world's land, but the U.S. produces 48% of the world's corn plus 65% of coarse grain exports.

SUMMER COW CARE

All of us enjoy being comfortable, especially on a hot summer day; so do cows! High producing cows do their best when cool and comfortable. One of the coolest, most comfortable spots on many farms could be a WELL VENTILATED barn. In addition to sheltering cows from the sun, it also protects them from many of those very annoying biting and sucking flies found out of doors. Keeping cows indoors on hot days can offer other advantages, too. It conserves their energy and thus reduces body heat. Coliform mastitis flare-ups can be reduced because there is less opportunity for cows to lie down in muddy loafing areas or wade belly deep in water. There will be less trampling destruction to the pastures; cows can be allowed to graze during the night.

If cows are outside during hot days, be sure they have plenty of shade, preferably is a well-drained, breezy location with water, salt, minerals and other feeds, such as hay, close by. If no shade is available, consider building an artifical shade to provide 30-50 square feet of shade per animal. A narrow shade structure oriented approximately north and south will allow greater opportunity for the rest area to dry out as the sun shifts from east to west.

GOOD VENTILATION

If cows are kept indoors, good ventilation is essential for good comfort. It will also keep the barn drier and the air cleaner, and thus help prevent mastitis and other diseases. A number of things can be done to improve ventilation. (1.) Open the doors, windows and sides of stables widely and avoid blocking air flow. (2.) Open the peaks, ridges, and gable ends of barns, or install a large ventilation flue. (3.) Use light-colored, reflective building materials and paints. (4.) Keep plenty of height and slope to ceilings. (5.) Use fans for positive air movement--for replacing stale, warm, moist air with fresh, cooler, drier air; about 500 cfm per cow are recommended for summer. (6.) Fans can also be used to create comforting breezes by blowing lots of fresh air over the cows. These breezes also help to discourage flies.

NEW FLY CONTROL BREAKTHROUGH

Controlling flies also contributes to cow and human comfort–and to a healthier environment and better relations with the neighbors.

Two new insecticides, Ectiban and Atroban, have recently received special clearance for use as a residual spray in Pennsylvania to control flies in dairy and livestock barns and in poultry houses. Field studies performed by Penn State entomologists have shown these two insecticides to be very effective in providing long lasting control of flies, including those flies which have developed resistance to many other products. Hopefully, these two materials will soon be available.

Half the battle in controlling flies is to start early, before the adult population builds up and before egg laying activity gets into high gear. If you already have a large adult fly population before you start on a residual spray program, don't expect overnight results. It'll take about two weeks for fly eggs recently laid to hatch out, and most residual spray programs are designed to work only on the adult flies.

Basic to any good fly control program is good sanitation. To help prevent fly breeding activity, remove manure frequently, especially bedded pack manure and other damp manure accumulating along the corners of scrape alleys. Dry manure or liquid manure can not support fly breeding activity, but damp manure can.

Larvacides, when fed to cattle, can help control the development of fly larvae in the manure. But, to be most effective, these materials should be fed to all cattle on the farm, not just the milking herd; otherwise, fly larvae will continue to develop in the untreated manure around the farm.

Dust bags strategically located in parlor exits, feeding areas, shady areas or rest areas can help protect cows from annoying face flies and thus helping prevent pink eye. Baits, livestock sprays, space sprays, insecticide-containing ear tags, etc. can provide additional relief.

APPETITES AND FAT TEST

Fat tests and good appetites are hard to maintain in summer. When cows are hot, especially high-producing cows, they don't eat well, production drops, and conception rates decline. A cow's body heat increases as she digests coarse, fibrous feeds; thus, cows crave less-fibrous feeds, and then, fat tests decline.

Shade, good ventilation, water, a "cool" ration and palatable feeds are very important. Shade and ventilation were discussed earlier. Water is your cheapest feed, and it "makes" milk! Be sure cows have easy access to plenty of fresh, cool water. Shade, feed, salt and minerals should be nearby.

Appetites can be enticed by keeping cows cool, having good water readily available, keeping all feeds–grains and silages–fresh and palatable, and by feeding a "cooler" ration. A "cooler" ration is one that contains more grain and the highest quality forages available. It'll be a challenge to feed sufficient fiber to maintain desired fat tests without curtailing production and appetite. Using ration buffers such as sodium bicarbonate and magnesium oxide may help. It may be necessary to choose either a higher test or high production; it may not be possible to obtain both. To keep feeds fresh, it may be necessary to offer smaller portions and feed more frequently, and to mix smaller batches. A variety of feeds and feed ingredients may help entice appetites. Proper balancing of the ration is also essential for good summer performance.

MASTITIS AND MILKING

Avoid stressing cows prior to milking; don't keep cows standing or long periods of time in a hot, crowded, poorly-ventilated holding area.

Mastitis organisms build up rapidly under warm, moist, summer conditions. Good sanitation, good ventilation, and proper nutrition will help keep flare-ups under control. Pay particular attention to stall beds and rest areas; keep them as clean and dry as possible. Also, be conscientious in drying off cows udders before milking, using individual cow towels to wash and dry the udders, teat dipping, dry cow treating, milking infected cattle last, etc. If coliform mastitis is a problem, keep cows away from wet, filthy areas and consider using a teat dip such as Teat Shield to protect the cattle from coliform infections. If infected quarters are treated, be sure to observe required withholding times. The new, very sensitive antibiotic test for detecting residues in milk makes it doubly important to withhold all treated milk.

Read The Milkweed

"Hardin has been on top of the brewing Eastern financial mess for more than a year, but his warnings have gone unnoticed."

—from the June 9, 1980 editorial in The Daily Star, Oneonta, NY,

There's a new dairy publication with the guts to tell you what's going on inside the milk business . . . The Milkweed.

The Milkweed is a monthly report about milk marketing for the dairy farmer. With all the assets you have invested in your dairy business . . . you'd better know what's going on.

Pete Hardin edits and publishes The Milkweed. Hardin is a pro at covering milk marketing. You've read his articles in The Holstein-World, The Farm Journal, Hoard's Dairyman, Ag-Review and American Agriculturist. Hardin calls spades just that in The Milkweed. Only dairy farmers who want straight talk should subscribe.

Who reads The Milkweed?A thousand smart dairy farmers and dairy leaders throughout the country. They rely on The Milkweed as the top source for news inside the dairy industry.

The directors of Inter-State Milk Producers Cooperative, NEDCO and LeHigh Valley Farmers all read The Milkweed. Why? They have to know what's going on. And so do you.

Hardin has been the journalist with the guts and sources to tell you what's really going on inside Eastern Milk Producers. Month after month, The Milkweed has revealed the shennanigans at Eastern costing members hundreds of thousands of dollars.

In January, The Milkweed revealed what the auditors found in studying profits made by Eastern directors selling butter and cheese . . . as well as how much Eastern was paying Mrs. Tewksbury—the president's wife— each week.

In February, The Milkweed predicted Eastern members would get hit with a million dollar-plus milk check assessment because of bankruptcies.

And in May, The Milkweed reached readers with details of Eastern's $2.5 million check assessment before Eastern's letter arrived explaining the big bite out of members' milk checks.

In the May issue of The Milkweed, readers learned that Eastern claim to the NYS Producer Security Fund is being challenged by the state because Eastern didn't file its claims on time. Readers saw the prediction that Mr. Tewksbury was in line for a high-paying job at Eastern in the May issue of The Milkweed.

Also in the May issue, Hardin revealed the penalty clauses in the Leprino contract which mean Eastern can lose tens of thousands of dollars each month if the co-op is unable to supply Leprino with the contracted volumes of milk.

And Milkweed subscribers know why there will likely be another future million dollar milk check assessment against Eastern members' milk checks.

And in June . . . possibly the biggest revelation yet concerning the Leprino deal! You'll read it first in The Milkweed.

If you earn your living milking cows . . . or anywhere in the milk business . . . you should read the new, sometimes controversial milk marketing report, The Milkweed. Each month The Milkweed will tell you what's going on inside the milk business .

Pete Hardin, editor and publisher of The Milkweed

Bags give starting dairyman economical storage option

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

KISSEL HILL — Twenty-six-year-old Lester Landis, Jr., R3 Lititz, thinks he may have found an economical option to help him get started in dairy farming.

With continually rising costs involved in building a new stanchion barn and the purchase of milking stock, Landis will be utilizing the new Ag-Bag concept for the storage of most of his haylage and silage.

Already, he has about 160 tons of first-cutting alfalfa haylage in one of the long plastic bags lying in a section of pasture on the farm located along Kissel Hill Road behind the Lancaster Airport.

This fall, he'll be filling about three more bags with corn silage. Each bag can hold between 175 and 220 tons.

A custom harvester with a self-propelled chopper, Landis hopes to be in the dairy business by November.

Construction will begin shortly on a 38 by 140-foot one-story cement block stanchion barn with pipeline milking system.

Lester Landis Jr., R3 Lititz, stands by large Ag-Bag containing about 160 tons of haylage for his first cutting of alfalfa.

The stanchion barn will be equipped with 56 stalls. Landis hopes to begin with a herd of about 50 Holsteins.

The youthful farmer opted for the Ag-Bag storage system rather than make a substantial investment in upright silos.

"I figured that adequate silo capacity would have cost about $30,000 more," he said.

"With the cost of renting the equipment for filling and the bags, it will run me about one-tenth that amount for my first year."

Landis has a 16 by 40-foot conventional silo on the farm, along with a smaller 10 by 40-foot facility. Second and third cutting alfalfa will be put in the larger silo.

"This will give me a chance to make some comparisons concerning the feed stored in the silo versus that in the bag," he said.

The first-cutting alfalfa in the first bag was tested at about 18 percent protein.

Landis has done quite a bit of custom harvesting with his self-propelled machine. In the past few years, he's averaged about 400 hours a season on it.

"Going into dairy farming, I'll be cutting down quite a bit on the custom work," he said.

"Primarily, I'll continue cutting on those farms on which I can see the silos from here."

Landis rents the farm from his father, who operated it since the 1950's. He and his wife, Judy, now live on it with their two-year-old daughter, Julie.

The farm includes about 70 acres and Landis rents another 30. He raises primarily alfalfa and corn with a little barley and wheat. He also has a few brood beef cows which were a fill-in before planning to go into the dairy business.

"The Ag-Bag storage has given me some extra operational flexibility, particularly in just getting started," he said.

"I'll be using a tractor loader to remove the haylage or silage and then feed with a used mixer-wagon."

Eliminating the need for construction of additional silo capacity, Landis explained he was able to concentrate more on other phases of his plans, such as barn construction and acquiring stock.

The Ag-Bag storage concept features the sausage-shaped plastic bags, which measure nine feet in diameter and 135 feet long.

They are described as a management tool in which feed can be tested coming out of the bag and consistent crop from specific fields can be kept in individual bags.

The bags can be filled partially or entirely to keep crop harvests separate. Rations can be mixed from several bags containing haylage, silage, high moisture corn or grain.

Cow type emphasized at Adams Holstein meeting

GETTYSBURG — A judging contest, an explanation of the type classification program and remarks by the County Agent provided the program for the approximately 100 dairy farm family members who attended the Holstein Twi-light meeting held last Wednesday, at Way-Brite Farms, R9, Gettysburg.

Paul Waybright greeted the visitors, introduced his family and work force and told how they cared for 102 milking Holsteins with crops produced on 800 acres of farmland Adam Lobaugh, President of the Adams County Holstein Association, presided at the meeting

"Type classification is a practical program of evaluating and rating the functional body characteristics of Holsteins" said Paul King, Holstein breeder from Delta, York County Representing the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, King told how the information derived from classification is used by dairymen for selecting functionally sound, long-living animals to produce future offspring

"The score given each classified animal is also used in advertising and sales promotion to increase the value of the animal" he said

Working with an animal from the Waybright herd, King explained how the classifier "describes" every animal with code numbers for each of the heritable traits evaluated. udder support, rear udder, fore udder, teat size and placement, legs and feet, rump, back, front and stature and head In addition, specific undesirable traits, such as winged shoulder, weak pasterns, front end toeing out, crampiness and too small for age, are identified

"Dairymen enroll about 300,000 Holsteins for descriptive classification every year", said King. He encouraged county farmers to maintain membership in the national Holstein Association and to participate in this valuable evaluation program.

County Agent Thomas E. Piper complimented the dairymen for their personal support of milk production. "Dairy Princess Ann Murren has produced radio spot announcements which are broadcast several times daily from the local radio station," he said.

Reporting that 100 persons had turned out for the "barn-raising" at the Eldon Baum farm, R.1, Abbottstown, on Tuesday, Piper suggested that additional assistance would be helpful in getting the roof in place.

Reservations for the annual dairy tour of Huntingdon County, scheduled for Tuesday, July 8, 1980, must be made before July 1st so that bus transportation can be arranged. Piper urged the dairymen to contact members of the committee immediately.

In the judging contest held in conjunction with the meeting, Dean Lobaugh, R. 1, Aspers, was winner in the Junior Division, Daniel Rush, District Sales Manager, American Breeders Service

Refreshments for the meeting were provided by JDC Sales, Inc , R 1, Biglerville.

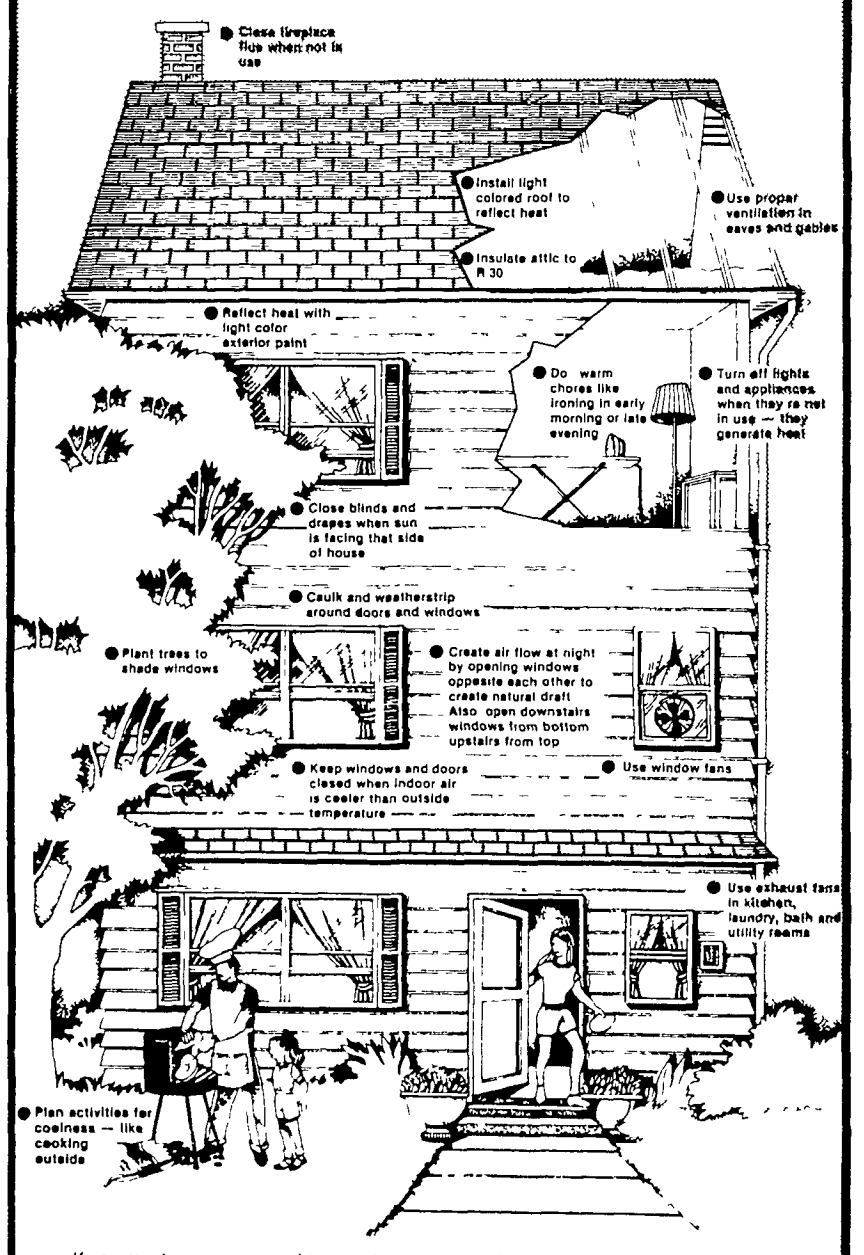
You may not need your air conditioner

If you follow these tips to keep your home cool, you'll cut costs by keeping the heat out and the cool air in!



Close fireplace flue when not in use
Install light colored roof to reflect heat
Use proper ventilation in eaves and gables
Insulate attic to R 30
Reflect heat with light color exterior paint
Do warm chores like ironing in early morning or late evening
Turn off lights and appliances when they re not in use — they generate heat
Close blinds and drapes when sun is facing that side of house
Caulk and weatherstrip around doors and windows
Plant trees to shade windows
Create air flow at night by opening windows opposite each other to create natural draft Also open downstairs windows from bottom upstairs from top
Keep windows and doors closed when indoor air is cooler than outside temperature
Use window fans
Use exhaust fans in kitchen, laundry, bath and utility rooms
Plan activities for coolness — like cooking outside

If you must use an air conditioner don t overcool Temperature settings should not be below 78 degrees in summer and the temperature difference between inside and out should be 15 degrees or less Keep your unit properly serviced for better pe formance and economy If you re buying a new unit check the label for energy efficiency It should have an efficiency rating of no less than 7 5 EER The higher the EER rating the less costly the appliance is to operate because of lower electricity consumption

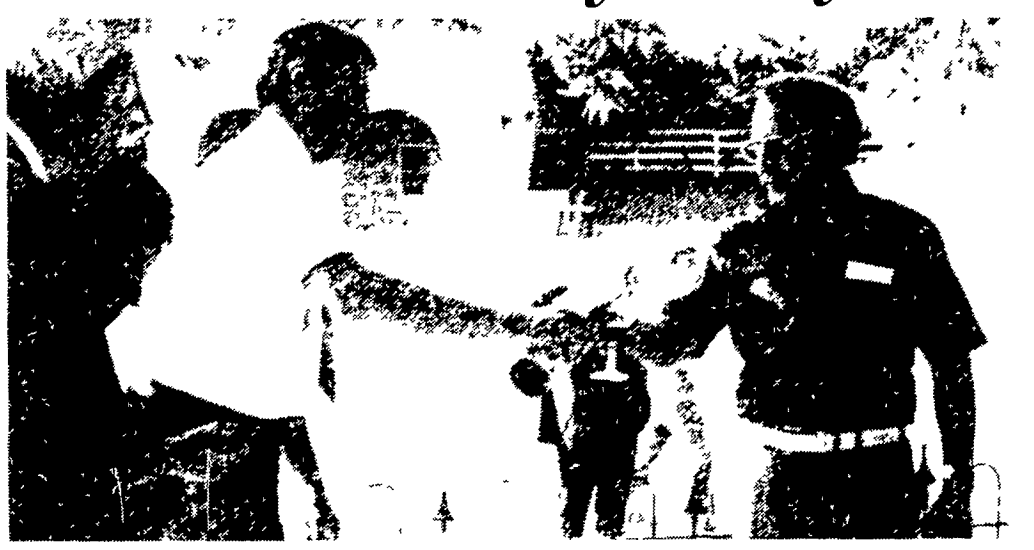
BAINBRIDGE — Penrose Hallowell, State Secretary of Agriculture, popped the first cork of Keystone Kiss at the Nissley Vineyards winery, R 1, Bainbridge last Saturday

The premier uncorking of Keystone Kiss was celebrated by the J Richard Nissley family, producers of the wine, along with 400 invited guests who spent the early evening tasting wine while strolling the lawn of the stone-arch winery

"I like wines," said Hallowell, a dairy farmer "However, I am not a very sophisticated taster so I couldn't really give an exact rating the way I could with a dairy cow "

The wine label bears the "Pennsylvania Agriculture — We're Growing Better" logo and leaves no doubt that Keystone Kiss was produced from grapes grown in Pennsylvania

"We are proud to be producing wine in our home state and we want people to know exactly where it comes from," said winemaker Dick Nissley Keystone Kiss is the first commercial wine to be named in honor of the Keystone State



First glass of Keystone Kiss wine is poured by State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, left, for J. Richard Nissley of Nissley Vineyards, R1 Bainbridge.

"It's rose color and softly sweet taste are exactly what the name suggests," said Nissley's daughter, Judy

The Nissley Vineyards winery is located among the rolling farmland hills of the Susquehanna Valley eight miles north of Columbia, off Route 441 The public is invited to taste Keystone Kiss at the winery between the hours of noon and 6 p m , Monday through Saturday.

Keystone Kiss is the newest of ten wines now produced by Nissley Vineyards. Others which have been available for purchase at the winery since it opened in July, 1978 include Naughty Marietta, Aurora, Seyval Blanc and DeChaunac All are made from French-hybrid grapes.

Nissley's large stainless steel converted milk tanks are the modern approach to winemaking, even though his 25 acres of grapes are harvested by the traditional hand-picked method.

"We are very fussy about the quality of the grapes as well as the cleanliness of the equipment we use to handle the juice and resulting wine," said Nissley

Local firemen learn farm equipment rescue

BY CURT HARLER

RHEEMS — Firemen and ambulance crews from a large number of Lancaster County companies are attending a course in farm machinery rescue operations.

The purpose of the sessions is to teach emergency crews how to extract a person trapped in moving parts of any piece of farm equipment safely and swiftly.

The course, sponsored by the Lancaster Farmers' Association Womens Safety Committee, consists of four seminars. This is the second year the course has been offered.

Shirley Garner, Mt. Joy, explained the purpose of the training seminars is to teach emergency crews to operate farm equipment, to turn machinery off, to be aware of potentially dangerous operating parts of machines.

Many of the non-farm firemen participating in the course are not familiar with power take off systems. Several presumed machinery was operated by direct ground drive mechanisms of some sort and that operating parts would stop once the machine itself stopped moving.

Those who were aware of PTO systems often were not familiar with how to turn the system off.

On hand to explain the in's and out's of farm equipment was Ken Messick, son of the owner of Messick's Farm Equipment where the seminars are being held.

The rescue company members are encouraged to poke around all sorts of equipment including tractors, hay balers, corn pickers, PTO units, and other live farm machinery.

Firemen are able to tear apart junk machinery with a Hurst tool to get them familiar with the strenght of metal used in farm machinery.

They learn the differences in strength between the older, heavier metals and the newer lightweight metals with similar strength.

While most of the work they did was with New Holland and International Harvester equipment (because that's what Messick's handles), the rescue crews are encouraged to go out to local farms or other equipment dealerships and get familiar with the location of stop switches and other power controls on other brands of machinery.

In addition to the hands-on work with used machinery, the fire crews are showed films of farm equipment in action.

The movies were not necessarily farm safety oriented. The basic idea, as Shirley Garner explained, was to get the non-farm firemen familiar with what a piece of equipment does in the field, its power, and what it looks like in action.

The Lancaster County program is one of the first such seminars offered anywhere.

Similar programs are underway in Utah and Kansas. The Lancaster Farmers' Association women developed their program with help from Shirley Garner, Lancaster County Farmers' Association Womans Safety Committee, provides background information on farm equipment rescue to about 35 firemen at a training session Tuesday evening. The course teaches prompt removal of persons trapped in farm equipment.

Representative explains ag preservation measure

HARRISBURG — A new approach to the preservation of agricultural land has been passed by the state House.

Rep. Noah Wenger, co-sponsor of the measure, said House Bill 1793 would permit local government to create special agricultural areas in order to protect prime farmland from being zoned or developed out of existence.

The Vice Chairman of the Agriculture Committee said the measure also provides for an Agricultural Area Advisory Committee and establishes a system for the formation of an agriculture area.

Wenger said once an agricultural area is established, it would be subject to the following conditions:

Development easements The county could set up a program to purchase development easements from owners of land within the agricultural areas. Since the bill is voluntary, landowners would not be forced to sell such an easement to the county

Local ordinances. Local governments would be prohibited from adopting ordinances which unreasonably restrict farm structures or agricultural practices. Exceptions would be made for regulations directly affecting public health or safety.

Eminent domain. State agencies and local governments with the power of eminent domain could not condem land located within an agricultural area without the approval of certain agencies.

Wenger added the continued existence of an agricultural area would come up for review every eight years. Review procedures would include recommendations from the planning commission and the advisory committee in addition to a public meeting.

"This is a vital piece of legislation for Pennsylvania. This innovative method of dealing with land use will be a benefit to future generations," he concluded.

Penn State ag engineers and safety specialists.

Nowhere else in the country is a farm safety program much more developed than the two-year old course offered in Pennsylvania.

But the information is reaching those who need to learn about sophisticated, complex farm equipment At last year's seminar only two of the 84 men who participated in the sessions had any background in farm equipment.

This year's class had a larger percentage of farm-experienced members. But the practice, several said, was quite worthwhile.

Members of the Salunga, Mastersonville, Elizabethtown-Mt. Joy Forest Fire Crew, East Petersburg, Bainbridge, and Silver Springs fire companies were among those who attended the session this year.

Ken Messick explains the operation of PTO driven haying equipment to a group of volunteer firemen. The rescue crews also were able to familiarize themselves with other typical pieces of farm equipment in case they should be called on to remove an accident victim.

Tobacco use reduced, larger crop expected

LANCASTER — Despite stable cigarette sales, total U.S. tobacco use in the 1979-80 marketing year will fall below last year's level because of a drop in U.S. leaf exports

However, disappearance is about one-sixth above 1979's short crop, and the July carryover will fall sharply from last year's 3.6 billion pounds

Cigarette output for the year ending June 30 may fall about 1 percent below the 707 billion cigarettes in 1978/79 because manufacturers reduced inventories. Cigarette consumption remains steady since the larger adult population is offset by reduced per capita use. Cigarette exports continue to gain briskly, so a modest gain in U S. cigarette output is expected in the second half of 1980.

Output of smokeless products (snuff and chewing toabcco) is increasing, but cigar and smoking tobacco production continues below a year earlier.

Despite larger carryover, use of fire-cured and dark air-cured tobaccos is decreasing from last marketing year. Tentative supplies for next season are slightly higher than the season now ending

Domestic cigar leaf use is rising, cigar production continues to drop, and chewing tobacco output is gaining Estimated use for cigar types will exceed last year's crops, leaving smaller carryovers into 1980/81 Prospective larger crops for 1980 could maintain total supplies

Unmanufactured tobacco exports for July 1979-April 1980 were 12 percent below a year earlier So shipments for the year ending June 30 will fall short of the 671 million pounds of July 1978-June 1979 Several but reduced purchases when demand fell and the 1979 U S crop was extremely short

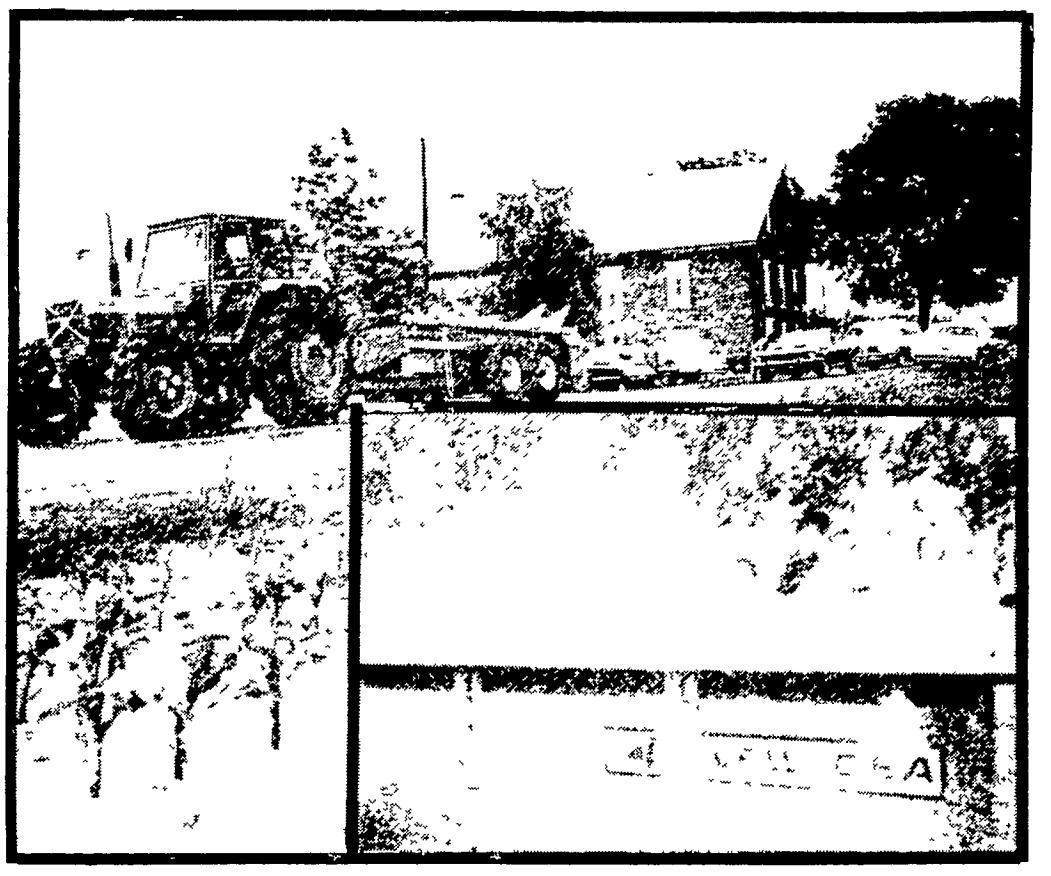
Based on planned acreage and average yields, the total U S tobacco crop could reach 1 9 billion pounds in 1980, one-fourth larger than last year. With the 9-percent higher support level, prices may average slightly higher than in 1979 Overseas purchases from the 1980 crop could increase from the low level of 1979 if the U S crop size reaches the projections and the quality is above average

Flue-cured tobacco exports in July 1979-April 1980 were below a year earlier Some European Community destinations substantially reduced imports due to a stock increase the previous year For the year ending June 30, about 365 million pounds will be exported, 18 percent less than 1978/79 Burley exports for the crop year ending Sept 30 are expected to exceed last year's record level of 86 million pounds

During July 1979-March 1980, tobacco imports were 285 million pounds, six percent above a year earlier. Imports are mostly cigarette leaf and scrap. U S. manufacturers' stocks of imported cigarette tobacco on April 1 were four percent above a year earlier, while stocks of foreign-grown cigar tobacco decreased nine percent.

With steady cigarette output, domestic flue-cured use for the year ending June 30 is close to last season's level But with the smaller exports, total disappearance of flue-cured tobacco will fall 8 percent below the 1 18 billion pounds of last season. This year's disappearance still exceeds the very low 1979 crop, so the July 1980 carryover of flue-cured will fall below the 2.1 billion pounds of a year earlier.

Auction markets for 1979-crop Maryland tobacco began April 9 and ended May 22. Prices averaged $1.40 per pound, 17 cents more than a year earlier. Disappearance of Maryland tobacco in the current marketing year may not equal last season since exports are down.



Down the road of life in a manure spreader

It was an auspicious start to married life for the former Joy Moyer and her husband John Brubaker. When they were wed at Mt. Zion Church near Hamlin last Saturday they found their first trip together after tieing the knot was to be in a manure spreader. The ride took them from the church to the Ono Fire Hall for the reception where Lebanon County Dairy Princess Diana Maulfair, the maid of honor, drank a milk toast. At least the spreader was brand new and equipped with seats for the bridal party. The newlyweds will reside at R7 Lebanon. They are the children of the John Moyers, R1 Jonestown; and J. Carl Brubakers, R7 Lebanon.

Brief answers to short questions

Sheila's Shorts

By Sheila Miller

This week's column will be short and sweet.

Did you every try to type with all of your fingers wearing bandages? Well, after handling over 1000 bales of hay, my typing-key-pushers are covered with battle scars and blisters

So, without further explanation — because anyone who has experienced binder-twine blues knows the feeling — let's answer some readers' questions.

Where's the hare auction?

Paul Turner, owner of the Red Barn Rabbit Farm, R2 Airville writes:

Would you please send me some information? I am very anxious to visit Folger's Auction, but I haven't been able to find the address or phone number. I have rabbits that I would like to take up there.

I had some difficulty in answering your question, Mr. Turner, because I had to make an assumption.

You asked for Folger's Auction, which I am not familiar with. But Lancaster Farming does carry the reports from Foglesville Live Poultry Auction, which lists rabbit sales.

So, my assumption is that this is the auction you want.

Although I don't have the exact location of the auction, I did manage to get their telephone number. It's 215/395-6611.

The town of Fogelsville is located in Lehigh County, along Route 100. It is just north of Interstate 78-Route 22, about 5 miles west of Allentown and 10 miles east of Hamburg.

Since there is no direct route from York County to Allentown, I'll let you decide what the best trip will be for you

What's parity?

Roland G Kamoda R1 Monongahela, writes and asks

What is parity?

Now, that's a good question. Farmers everywhere have heard and read the word, probably several thousand times. But, what does it really mean?

Unfortunately, my education in agriculture economics was one of my weak spots — basically because I always found columns of numbers much less interesting than livestock and crops.

But, knowing farm business and ag economics, I suppose, becomes a necessary evil for all farmers.

For a very simple explanation on the term, I decided to go to my stand-by reference, the encyclopedia.

According to World Book, parity "measures the equality of purchasing power of two different currencies, or of the price of goods during two different periods."

They explain that here in the U S. parity applies to farm products. "The parity price for a particular farm product is that price which gives a farmer the same purchasing power that was had during a specified period of time called the base period "

The most common base period, they say, is the period from 1910-1914.

To make sure the farmer got 'a fair share", the federal government passed the Agricultural Adjustment Act in 1933. This act introduced parity to measure agricultural equality, and developed a system of price supports to insure it, they explain.

"The law provided for an index of prices for things farmers sell, and one for things they buy. The index number of prices received for any particular year is found by comparing the sum of the prices of crops during that year with the sum of the prices of crops during the base period. The index number of prices paid is found the same way. If the index number of prices received equals the index number of prices paid, prices are 'at parity' "

Then in 1940, Congress made some changes in how parity is computed. The change required the Secretary of Agriculture to use a 10-year moving average if it gave a higher support price than what the 1910-1914 average gave

According to Ruth Tallman, county executive director for the USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service in Dauphin County, parity comes into play primarily in dairy price support programs.

She said the target period between 1910 and 1914 is used; but, she noted, the price index used is that of an average good year — not an exceptional year.

Tallman said that parity can be best understood by remembering that the price paid to a farmer should be equivalent to 1910-14 prices. "In other words, if a bushel of wheat bought a pair of new shoes in 1910, it should in 1980."

But, she closed by noting, today's milk support prices are only between 75 percent and 90 percent parity.

Shepherds learn sheep management skills

LEESPORT — Fifteen people received certificates of accomplishment for successful participation in a sheep clinic held at the Leesport Market & Auction.

The sheep clinic, sponsored by the Extension Service and Penn State, was conducted as part of a statewide effort to expand sheep production in Pennsylvania. Basic sheep management skills were taught by Clyde A.B. Myers, County Agent

Catching sheep, making "instant" sheep halters, determining the age of sheep, determining the rectal temperature, giving intramuscular injections, and deworming sheep with dose syringe, were taught to enable shepherds to be competent in performing approved sheep management practices.

Myers explained and demonstrated each skill. A laboratory session followed which allowed each participant to practice the 'new' skills.

To qualify to receive the certificate of accomplishment, individuals had to score 85 or higher. Those receiving the certificate of accomplishment were: Ken Cook, R1 Mohnton; Paul, Pauline, Paula and Frank Jr. Nave, R1 Hamburg; Chris Reed, R1 Hamburg; Dennis & Sandy McLaughlin, R1 Bernville; John & Barb Bernard, R1 Bechtelsville; Robin & Bill Koch, R5 Sinking Spring; Jay & Bill Weist, R1 Leesport; and Fred Bube, R1 Robesonia.

Red & Whites are latest in dairy breeds

BY SHEILA MILLER

ELIZABETHTOWN — For the last issue in this year's Dairy Month, it is only fitting that Lancaster Farming takes a look at the last "breed" of dairy cattle recognized by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. We're talking about the Red & Whites.

According to John Carpenter, of the Red & White Dairy Cattle Association, Crystal Spring, there have always been red and white cattle in the Holstein breed. In the countries where the breed originated, he pointed out, there was no discrimination between the black and white or the red and white cattle.

However, when the Holsteins were imported into the U.S., black and white cattle were required inorder to be registered with the Holstein Friesian Association. Since black is dominant over red, some animals that looked black in color, but that carried the red trait, were imported over the years.

Carpenter pointed out there is no difference between Red & White dairy cattle and the black and white Holsteins, except their color. But, he added, from 1885 to the 1960's, they weren't recognized or registered in any herd book.

"The red calves were of no value to the farmers. Good cattle that carried the red recessive trait and produced red calves were considered undesirable, like they carried the trait of mule foot. Many outstanding pedigreed calves were disposed of — and the farmer made sure that no one knew about the red calf," he said.

Realizing the waste of productive cattle just because of color, the American Red & White Dairy Cattle Society was incorporated on February, 1964, Carpenter said. In 1966, they changed their name to Red & White Dairy Cattle Association.

The association was spearheaded by a group of Milking Shorthorn breeders. Discouraged with their breed, these people saw the Red & Whites as the best way to improve their production. This resulted in cross breeding the two, Carpenter explained.

He said that the Milking Shorthorn Society handled the registration of the Red & Whites at first. But, as more red Holstein blood was infused into the Milking Shorthorn breed and purebred Red & Whites were produced, disagreements arose which eventually brought about the split between the associations.

Since its shaky beginnings, RWDCA has grown. Today, it boasts about 800 members across the U.S. and Canada. Last September, there were 68 Pennsylvania members on the association's books.

"Our registration and membership has increased between 10-20 percent," said Carpenter.

One reason for their growth is that RWDCA accepts grade herds into their program. "As long as it's dairy, we have a completely open herd book — even colored breeds can be entered," said Carpenter.

Of the 3905 cattle registered, Carpenter noted 46 percent are black and white (grade and double registered) and 8 percent are mixed or colored (anything that's not Holstein).

A lot of the cattle registered with RWDCA are also registered under Bridleborough, Carpenter said.

He pointed out that many people said they felt by opening their herd books to other breeds, RWDCA wouldn't get the right kind of cattle.

Disputing this theory, Carpenter said RWDCA requires the normal sketches and sire identification, just as the other breed register does. "Besides, most people who go to the trouble of registering their cattle and spending their money invest it in good cows."

Carpenter explained that when the breed association started in 1964, all the bloodlines of the cattle were identified and recorded with certificates. Now, as more breeders are getting involved in Red & Whites, different bloodlines are being introduced into a breed history that stems from a few sires.

He said 95 percent of the Red & White's genetic base can be attributed to one tremendous sire, ABC Reflection Sovereign. This bull, he said, died many years ago, but his popularity and reputation as a sire lived on.

Carpenter recalled that the last ampule of semen from this bull was auctioned off for $30,000 — and the glass ampule was cracked. Comparing that to today's popular bull, he said Ivanhoe's semen is selling for between $5000 and $6000.

With a predicted total of roughly 5000 registered cattle for this year, Carpenter enthusiastically said, "There's been a complete turn-around in dairy producers' attitudes toward Red & Whites, with roughly a 400 percent increase in registered animals.

"Now, a bull carrying red is more popular, and Red & Whites are worth two times as much as the black and white Holsteins in the export markets."

One Lancaster County farmer that agrees with Carpenter is Kenneth D. Myer, R5 Elizabethtown.

Out of a milking herd of 70 cows at Myerose Red & Whites, there are only two that aren't registered with RWDCA. Myer said he has "90 percent more Red & Whites than anybody on this side of the Mississippi."

In the Red & White business about 10 years. Myer told Lancaster Farming he chose the breed because his dad didn't want black and white Holsteins.

Myer explained that when he worked for his dad, he saw the need to get more milk production than what he was getting with the Guernsey herd, even though he recognized Guernsey milk to have the best quality and butterfat.

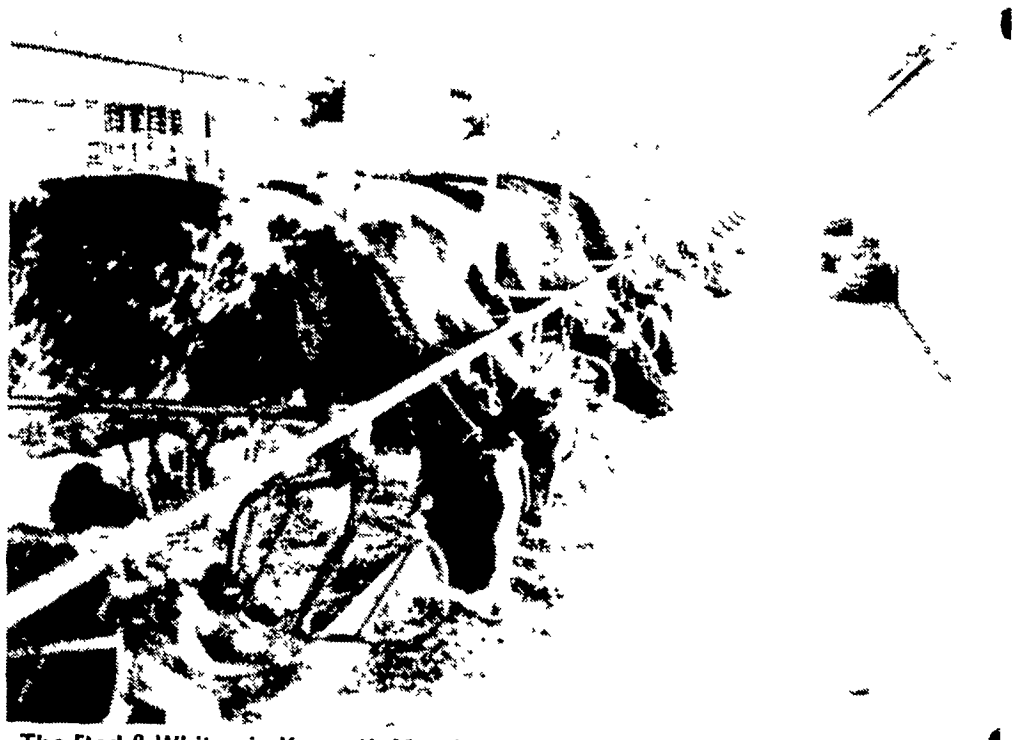
Over the next several years, the graduate of Elizabethtown High School and former FFA'er built up his Red & White herd

"I bought one or two cows and bought some calves. I advetized in the Pennsylvania Holstein News for years, and attended sales and visited farms in Canada It was a slow change from Guernsey".

In 1979, Myer bought the 130 acre farm from his dad, along with the cattle. He built a new barn, equipped

(Turn to Page B15)

C Blue Haven Rose Ned is an excellent Red & White cow with a 305 day lactation record of 23,510 pounds milk and 1011 pounds fat. She was the first place 4-year-old Cow in Milk and Grand Champion at the 1978 International Red & White Show, and was the first place Aged Cow in Milk and the Reserve Grand Champion last year.



The Red & Whites in Kenneth Myer's new barn leisurely eat their silage. Tiles serve as the cows' dinner plates. "Concrete will deteriorate, where tile stays smooth and is easy to clean" said Myer.

The highest pedigree index young Red & White sire is Sleepy-Hollow Mag Chief, sired by C Romandale Shalimar Magnet and out of a very good Arlinda Chief dam

Standing next to 5-year-old Petunia, Myer says her predicted production is 22,000 pounds milk and a little over 1000 pounds fat. She is a daughter of Argo Acres Marquis Ned, a Canadian bull.

Red & Whites

with comfort stalls and pipeline Now, he said, he wants to work on building a better Red & White herd

But, he noted, his upgrading plans are slightly hampered by the fact that there aren't many proven bulls in the breed

"The hottest bull right now is High Silo Haven Jet Star, a Canadian bull And Citation R is another popular bull But, there are just too many young bulls that haven't been proven yet"

Right now, Myer said his goal is to eventually buy or breed a cow good enough to transplant In the mean time, buyer from other states, Puerto Rica, Hungary, and Brazil are enjoying the Red & Whites Myer decides to sell.

The international market, Myer said, is not much different than selling locally because the Holstein Association takes care of the paperwork

But, he said, the buyers from outside the U S take home the best and pay for them, making the good Red & Whites alot harder to keep here for foundation stock (In Hungary, he said the Red & Whites are being crossbred with Simmental cattle)

Myer himself, is contributing some foundation sires to the breed, raising the bull calves out of his better cows.

Summing up his enthusiam and feelings for the breed, Myer smiled and said, "Basically, Red & Whites are the same all around as black and white Holsteins — they're just prettier"

Inseminator hits 100,000 mark

David Moon, left, holds the heifer that was technician, Bob Pond's, 100,000th first service. Robert Parr, NEBA District III Manager is on the right.

DUSHORE — Bob Pond, Dushore, a 35 year NEBA veteran, recently became the first person in the traditional Sire Power area of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, and West Virginia to breed 100,000 cows

This is the most significant honor to become a recipient of the elite 100,000 cow club award sponsored by the National Association of Animal Breeders

Bob becomes the 53rd person in the world to achieve this distinction of breeding 100,000 cows

Breeding cows for 35 years, Bob has seen many improvements in the agriculture industry during his career

"One particular development I've noticed in A.I is the overall genetic improvement in dairy cattle and faster results from a balanced breeding program," said Bob "There are many more excellent cows in outstanding herds than there were when I started"

Bob's district today is much like it was when he started Bob recalls the first year of his breeding career, he and the local vet bred 580 cows This is when there were eight to ten cow herds on the farm

"In those days," Bob said, "a 40 to 50 pound cow was a great cow, but today heifers milk a lot more than 50 pounds a day in their first lactation.

"Servicing the same area over the years I've seen that farmers are better managers and are more involved with the herd improvement by utilizing superior bulls through A I"

Since his first year of 580 services, Bob's highest volume year was 3500 first services He averages about 40,000 miles and 3000 first services yearly Bob said his biggest day was 50 calls

Bob's long experience of semen handling and a good working relation with the members has been an important factor in good conception. He is familiar with each farmer's cows and works as a team to build the superior genetics of the herd

"I feel it is important as a professional technician to keep my farmers up to date, and give them valuable suggestions for breeding and herd management improvements," said Bob

Bob bred his 100,00th cow at the Moonhaven Farm, David Moon family, New Albany, Pa This 200 acre dairy farm has been in the family for three generations and they say they are pleased with the service and sires from NEBA and Sire Power

David said, "Bob is a master at his trade It's very rare for us to have a heifer repeat"

Before Bob breeds the cow, David has the vet check the cow once or twice to see if she is cycling properly David keeps good records, writes down heats, and checks regularly according to a schedule for heat detection This routine, combined with Bob's expertise in breeding cattle has resulted in a 12 month calving interval on this farm.

According to the DHIA sheet there is a 1.1 service to conception; only about 1 cow in 10 repeats.

Currently, Bob is breeding cows to the highest PDM bulls from Sire Power like 9H602 CREEK and 9H196 JEMINI in the Moon herd "Bulls have to be +1200 or +1300 PDM and definitely +1 00 on type," said Bob "or we are not intersted."

Besides working closely with farmers and breeding 100,000 cows, Bob is active in his community He is a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Past Master of the Masons, and a trustee of the St. John's Lutheran Church Bob and his wife, Helen, have also been strong supporters of 4-H

Helen has also been instrumental in Bob's successful technician career, and still finds time to work in the county court house as an auditor during the winter months. Bob and Helen have two children, Joan, 27, and Ron, 15

The Board's Chairman, Joe Hughes, explained that any Delaware soybean producer is eligible to cast a ballot.

The following voting locations will be open between noon and 5 p.m. on Friday, August 15: Townsend's Inc., Mount Pleasant, Townsend Grain & Feed Co., Townsend; Agway, Inc., Dover, Taylor & Messick, Harrington; T.G. Adams & Son, Inc., Bridgeville; Laural Grain Co., Laurel; Agway Store, Frankford; and Southern States Nassau, Nassau.

Absentee ballots will be available through the Delaware Soybean Board prior to August 15.

Three public hearings will be held to provide an opportunity for growers to comment on the proposed development order.

The hearings are all scheduled for 8 p.m. and will be held at: Townsend's Inc., Mount Pleasant on Wednesday, June 25; Department of Agriculture Building, Camden on Wednesday, July 2 and the Georgetown Substation on Wednesday, July 9.

"STAY OUT OF THE HOSPITAL" $6 95, hard back, by Dr N W Boyd of Loganville, Penn 17342 Learn of treatment methods that eliminate hospital surgery for most rectal complaints, ruptures, and prostate problems and how the establishment has treated a doctor who has kept 7,000 people out of the hospital with these complaints With hospitals costs $150 00 a day one would think that these treatment methods would be preferred, but Blue Shield, the so-called doctor's plan, penalizes Dr Boyd and his patients by paying a small token payment Small wonder our national health costs are out of sight and unnecessary Surgery is rampant

INTRODUCING

RUMA PASS

The complete dairy feed that cuts protein costs while maintaining your milk production.

If you think high milk production requires high protein, think again.

New Master Mix Ruma Pass for corn and sorghum silage feeding programs lets you feed less protein without a loss in milk production. So you save on protein while your cows continue producing at their present level.

Ruma Pass contains by-pass proteins which are not easily digested in the rumen, but are readily digested in the small intestine. The net result is more usable protein with less waste.

And you pocket the savings.

For Lois Wanner, happiness is raising Brown Swiss

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

You can take the girl out of the country but you can't take the country out of the girl goes the old saying. In Lois Wanner's case, you can't do either. Lois, Narvon R2, took herself out of the country and tried working off the farm for several years after graduation, from Pequea Valley High School in 1976, but finally realized that what she liked best was working on the farm.

Since last August, that is just what she's been doing. Lois works with her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. R. Guy Wanner on their 40-acre farm and couldn't be happier. At the crux of her happiness are twelve Brown Swiss cows which Lois has built up from her eight years in 4-H project work.

Lois's Brown Swiss reside with her father's larger Holstein herd and together they milk about 30 animals. Lois helps with all the milking and with the farm work, and is an enthusiastic booster of Brown Swiss cattle. She states "I really enjoy working with Brown Swiss because they're quieter."

While there are only a handful of Swiss herds in the county, Lois remains convinced about their potential. She says, "I think their numbers are gradually increasing, although you may not notice it here. The main thing is to develop them. People will have to see how good they can be. Once we can prove them they'll get popular."

While their production falls short of the more popular Holsteins, Lois feels this can be corrected. "I believe you can get a Brown Swiss to produce as much as a Holstein. They have not been worked with to get as high a herd average. Brown Swiss have been increasing in production over the years because we have been working with them."

Lois feels productivity can be increased with a combination of better breeding with higher proven bulls and with a good feeding program. She said she likes the stanchion system she and her father use because they get to know the cows individually "We get to know them and can keep better tract of their productivity."

Lois is positive about her goals "I'd like to build up and have an all Brown Swiss herd. I have fairly good type, but I need to work on producion " She uses sires from Atlantic Breeders Cooperative and studies the Brown Swiss Bulletin and other dairy publications to keep up with current good bulls. She praises her technician for giving advice on matings.

But she admits that it is not easy to purchase Brown Swiss animals to increase her herd size. "I raise heifers from my best cows and in 1976 I purchased an animal from a private dispersal sale, but I haven't found one since. I'd rather buy from a dispersal than through an individual. I'd like to add on, but I will have to build from what I have."

Keeping the bulk tank in ship-shape is part of Lois' chosen occupation.

Lois poses in the pasture with one of her twelve "gentle" Brown Swiss, named Angel. Lois would like to increase her herd size and is working on increasing production.

She noted that last year six of her eight offspring from her animals were bulls, not an auspicious way to increase herd size. But up until that time she had lots of heifers, so she says philosphically that she was due a few bull calves

In her eight years of 4-H, Lois always did well with her Brown Swiss, and had quite a few first places to her credit. A grand championship at Solanco Fair is a source of pride, along with a first place aged cow at the 1979 Farm Show, which also took best udder in the class. While she enjoys showing, she won't be taking any animals on the show string this year. "I was pleased with how my aged cow did and if she has a heifer I want to show her," Lois states.

Homestead Notes

As a member of the Ayrshire, Jersey and Brown Swiss 4-H Club, Lois says, "I never minded being in a smaller group, but it was more fun in shows where the classes were bigger When you finish on top of a big class it makes you feel you have accomplished something. I enjoy the Farm Show because there is a lot of competition. I enjoy getting my animals ready by training them and getting them fitted."

Although she may sit out this year, Lois is certainly not about to give up showing She states, "I really love showing I learned a lot about the Brown Swiss breed from showing. In 4-H I really learned how to care for animals, and being with other kids, and showing together, made us work harder to do our best "

Having started with Brown Swiss as her first 4-H animal, Lois recommends the breed to any 4-H'er. "It's good to start out with a young animal, and Brown Swiss are gentle." She says she chose a brown Swiss for her project because her brother had one, but she can't recall how he became interested in the breed. Lois has two older brothers Bob, 27, and John, 25, both of whom live off the farm

Lois is a member of the Pennsylvania Brown Swiss Association and was a junior member of the National Association. She has attended canton meetings, and is currently working with Mrs. Donald Trimble and Mrs. Rohrer Witmer in putting together a directory of Brown Swiss breeders in Pennsylvania. She pointed out that this is the centennial year of the Brown Swiss Association, and that is what prompted the directory

For those who may not know, Brown Swiss are one of the oldest cultivated breeds of dairy cattle in the world, having 1000 years as a pure strain. Records on Brown Swiss date from the Middle Ages, but it was between 1869 and 1870 that they were first introduced into America with seven females and one bull. Until 1906, the breed was considered a dual-purpose breed, but in that year the national association declared that it would be a dairy breed. Today Brown Swiss rank fourth in numbers in the six major dairy breeds. There are nearly 765,000 animals in the Brown Swiss records books.

They are native to Switzerland, of course, and because of the rugged terrain from which they hail, they are a hardy breed of cows, adaptable to nearly any climate. They have a good conception rate, and Lois says she aims to have her cows freshen at two years

Lois also pointed out that Brown Swiss do not hit the peak of milk production until they are about 5-6 years old. "It takes a few years," she says.

While she would like to classify eventually, Lois feels she doesn't have enough good animals to justify it at this point. With her aspirations, she says jokingly, "My father keeps telling me I'm pushing him out of the barn, but I like them too."

Are there differences of opinion between father and daughter? Lois answers unhesitatingly, "We work good together " They had been building fence the day of the interview, and Lois said she usually prepares the fields for her father to plant. They farm about 70 acres.

(Turn to Page C4)

Lois and her father also have pullets which they raise. She says their poultry operation and dairy work out well together.

At about the same time she joined her father fulltime, the family made a decision to go into the pullet raising business. Lois says, "For us it was a good way to expand because we didn't have the land to expand with dairy. It works well together. The pullets don't take time from the dairy and we can check them at any time of the day." Lois says the chickens require about three to four hours of time daily.

When asked if she gets a lot of questions from her friends about her decision to farm fulltime, she says, "They know I like being outdoors and working with animals, but I do get a lot of questions. I just tell them I am fulltime on the farm. When you're doing something you enjoy you don't think about the long hours." While she admits that there are some jobs she doesn't like as well as others, she likes all the work that goes with farming.

After graduation, she worked on the farm for a short time, then got seasonal work at the nursery. Following that she worked as a teller in a bank and then spent a year and a half working for C.B. Hoober & Sons at Intercourse. "I really enjoyed my job as secretary at C.B Hoober's, but last August I came home I really enjoy my farm work. It's really important to like what you're doing I know I like it here."

There's no question about her loyalties to farm life as she states, "It is a nice place to work Living on a farm can mean long hours and we have our busy seasons, but it is a good way of life."

While she is most enthusiastic about her Brown Swiss herd, she enjoys all animals and likes to tend to the calves, whether they are Brown Swiss or Holsteins.

Stock up now on pork and poultry

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — This spring and summer should be a good time for consumers to stock up their home freezers with pork and poultry, says John Wysong, extension specialist.

Wysong doesn't recommend going out and buying a large freezer especially for this purpose. And he notes that short-term rental space in Maryland locker plants is probably hard to find.

But consumers who happen to have freezer space available should find June and July a good time to stock up with pork and poultry. Keep in mind, too, that the contents of a full freezer will stay frozen longer than the contents of a half-full freezer if the electrical power goes off. Also, by stocking up now with meat, you should have some empty freezer space available by August, when most homegrown garden produce will be ready for processing.

Taking advantage of current bargin prices on pork and poultry will also help ease the financial burden for producers of these tasty protein sources.

He pointed out that on-the-farm prices for both pork and poultry have been running below the break-even point for several months, and commercial cold storage supplies of pork in March were at their highest levels for the month since 1972.

There are two major reasons for current depressed prices of pork and poultry, Wysong reported. One is over-expansion—increased supplies of pork and poultry during the past six to nine months were more than enough to offset a reduction in beef cattle marketings.

Increased consumer interest in fish has also been a factor in keeping down red meat and poultry prices

The second big factor hurting producers has been inflation. This has resulted in little increase in consumer purchasing power in terms of 1972 dollars, despite sizeable gains in average U.S. per capita income.

It has helped to accentuate a shift in consumption from beef to pork and poultry. Dairy products have managed to hold their own fairly well, since they are well recognized as a good source of animal protein, vitamins and minerals at moderate cost

We're not 'pudding' you on — they're delicious

Ice creams and puddings are our feature this week as the last official dairy month column Ranging from standards such as Vanilla Cream Pudding and Vanilla Ice Cream to such delectables as Banana Sundae, and Banana Split Dessert, the offerings include Milk Sherbet, Butter Pecan Ice Cream, Dairy Queen Ice Cream and Spanish Cream.

When the weather's hot and sticky and the kids need something to occupy themselves, what better time to whip up a batch of homemade ice cream. So here's the scoop, ice cream's the hit of the week. Why not crank up a batch tonight?

VANILLA CREAM PUDDING

2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 cups milk
2 egg yolks, slightly beaten
2 teaspoons butter
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix sugar, cornstarch and salt in a saucepan. Gradually stir in milk. Cool over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens and boils. Boil 1 minute more, stirring constantly. Remove from heat Blend in butter and vanilla. Pour into dessert dishes. Serve warm or cool with cream or whipped cream

Rosene M. Brubacker, Ephrata

VANILLA ICE CREAM

2 cups sugar
5 cups milk
4 cups heavy cream
4½ teaspoons of vanilla
½ teaspoon salt

Add sugar gradually to beaten eggs. Continue to beat until the mixture is very stiff. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Pour into a gallon freezer and chill until ready to churn.

For chocolate chip — add a 12-ounce packet of chocolate chips during the last 15 minutes of churning when the ice cream begins to get firm.

Nancy Zuck, Elizabethtown

BANANA SUNDAE

For each serving use one cup cold milk and one small or medium very ripe banana. Put them into a blender and blend until thick and smooth. Pour into a large glass and add one scoop of vanilla ice cream. Top with nuts and a cherry if desired. Serve.

Mrs. Donald Hoover, Dallas

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM

6 eggs
¼ cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vanilla
2½ cups sugar
3 cups cream, whipped
1 quart crushed strawberries and a little red coloring

Heat milk. Mix ½ cup milk, eggs, flour and salt and add to the heated milk. Cook until boiling, the mixture will be thin. Remove from the heat and add vanilla. Cool. Whip cream and add to the mixture For a smooth ice cream, add ½ cup instant pudding to the cream and then whip Makes enough for a 6 quart freezer.

Mrs. Moses Lapp, Myerstown

FROZEN CUSTARD

6-8 egg yolks, well beaten
1 cup sugar
1 cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 pint milk
1 cup sugar
1 package unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 can evaporated milk
1 pint cream

Put the quart of milk in a double boiler Add the egg yolks, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup brown sugar and salt Cook until it coats a spoon. In another pan, heat 1 pint milk and 1 cup sugar along with the gelatin which has been soaked in the water Add the evaporated milk and the cream Combine the two mixtures and freeze

Mrs. Caleb Stauffer, Ephrata

Surely if one product of the dairy industry was singled out as the friend maker, ice cream would be it. Whether served in a dish and eaten with a spoon or served as a soda complete with striped straws, ice cream has terrific public appeal.

CARAMEL PUDDING

1 cup brown sugar
½ cup flour
½ teaspoon salt
1⅔ cups milk
1 cup water
3 egg yolks
1 teaspoon butter
1½ teaspoons vanilla
1 cup water

Mix the brown sugar and flour together and gradually add the water Mix remaining ingredients into the flour mixture except the butter and vanilla Bring to a boil and remove from the heat. Add vanilla and butter. Let cool, top with cream or mix in chopped nuts and bananas Instead of wasting the egg whites, beat them until frothy and mix them into the pudding after removing it from the heat.

Ella Mae Zimmerman, New Holland

Ladies Have You Heard?

PROPER CARE OF POTS AND PANS CAN SAVE ENERGY

Playing with mother's pots and pans has kept many generations of babies happy—but it has not made the best use of cooking energy.

The finest electric or gas range, equipped with all the latest features, won't perform well if you use warped or dented pots and pans. Utensils with scratched and scoured surfaces, inner surface which you can't get completely clean, warped bottoms, dented sides, loose handles or badly fitting lids will give unsatisfactory results both in cooking and in clean-up.

For the best cooking results and wise use of energy, check your utensils for these points:

* Straight sides. They help distribute heat evenly and make stirring easier.
* A flat bottom for even heating and preventing hot spots. This also keeps fats and liquids from collecting at low points.
* Rounded joints between sides and bottom for easy cleaning.
* A well-fitting cover to help hold in moisture, flavor, and nutrients.
* A heat-resistant, tightly-fitting handle or a well-balanced utensil which isn't likely to slip or tip even when the hands are wet.
* Heavy material which won't easily dent, crack, or warp with normal use.
* A variety of sizes in order to match the range burner size with the utensil's bottom. This saves energy and allows for the best distribution of heat over the bottom of the pot or pan.

RECYCLE SEWING PATTERNS TO FIGHT INFLATION

When you choose a pattern for a new skirt, shirt, or dress, do you visualize the myriad variations you'll make with that one investment, or do you go out and buy a new pattern for each garment you make?

Pattern costs are climbing along with all other costs and you can save money by using old patterns wisely. Start by sorting through all your old patterns.

Look at the illustration on the pattern envelope and check over the guide sheet, asking yourself the following questions:

* How often did I wear the previous item I made from this pattern?
* Is the style still in fashion?
* Is it suitable to my present lifestyle?
* Are details such as pockets, belt and trimmings up-to-date?
* Is the skirt length appropriate? If not, can it be adjusted?
* Is pattern size still correct?
* Is the pattern difficult or time-consuming to sew?

Make sure the patterns you decide to keep are in good repair. Patterns that don't fit easily into the original pattern envelop can be packed into clear plastic bags. Tape the illustration to the bag.

While you are making your old pattern inventory, take time to set up a simple filing system. Try arranging patterns according to season or in groups for each family member.

Energy savings with irrigation

NEWARK, Del. — With the rapidly rising cost of fuel, farmers who irrigate are interested in cutting water usage and fine tuning their systems and equipment to save energy.

The answer may be in reduction, says University of Delaware extension energy program coordinator Ron Jester. How can you reduce water application per acre and still come up with top yields? It's possible—especially if you've been using too much water.

Up to now, says Jester, farmers have been using two main methods for deciding when and how much to irrigate. One consists of eyeballing your crop and land, and using past experience to determine whether moisture is needed.

The second method consists of taking a spade, digging up a sample of soil, and squeezing it to figure out how much water is in it.

A more objective approach consists of using irrometers. The Delaware Extension Service will be using these measuring devices this summer in an attempt to increase irrigation efficiency.

Keep in mind that water saved in irrigation is roughly proportional to energy saved. So any measure that conserves water will normally conserve energy, too

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

A big garden takes a lot of hard work and if I didn't enjoy working outdoors, I wouldn't do it. In order to pay the rototilling bill, I sell sugar peas and strawberries. This year our berry crop was not very big as we sprayed the berries for weeds in the Fall before they were dormant and killed a lot of them

After I sell the first crop of peas, I allow them to bloom again and then I freeze the second crop in July.

In my rush to plant the flower garden this year, I made a real mistake and planted a row of morning glories there instead of along the fence. I couldn't believe I'd done that and only discovered it after they were covered with ground. So when they came up, I transplanted a half dozen to the mailbox post and a dozen to the fence and another half dozen to the post that holds our dinner bell and they all grew

I try to keep my onion rows immaculate as I remember some very grassy patches in past year when I had a "summer" baby. The 30 tomato plants are ready for paper bags to be laid under them before they branch out too much. The potatoes should be hilled and the leeks weeded again as they are so tiny for so long.

It is time to pull some of the red beets and carrots as fresh ones taste so delicious. And there is always the job of replacing one crop with another. When the hull pea fence comes down, in goes more green beans and some cucumbers and squash.

One never lacks for things to do in a garden although it is just a small part of my busy days.

Over the years, one thing about Mol-Mix never changed.

Quality.

From the first day that Mol-Mix® was made, the people at National Molasses made it with quality ingredients because they knew a better-quality supplement would mean more net profit for the cattlemen who used it

Today instead of decreasing or eliminating these quality ingredients because of shortages and higher costs Mol-Mix has maintained the same level of quality that has made it the liquid leader

BUFFERED RELEASE IS JUST PART OF OUR QUALITY STORY

Occasionally somebody finds out about one of our unique features and gets really excited about it For example, our buffered release of urea ammonia, heralded by other supplements as a brand-new innovation, has been in Mol-Mix for years to improve its protein-building efficiency And our performance-proven ingredients like corn distillers solubles, condensed fermented corn extractives, phosphoric acid, and ammonium polyphosphate, have yet to be included in most other supplements!

Stop in soon We would like to demonstrate the dramatic results that Mol-Mix can bring to your herd in terms of performance and profits We're not talking about something that will only add to your supplement costs we're talking about the bottom line

Sharon Cornman crowned Cumberland Dairy Princess

BY RUTH ANN BENEDICT
Staff Correspondent

NEWVILLE — Sharon Cornman, 18 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Creedin Cornman of R6 Carlisle, was crowned as 1980 Cumberland County Dairy Princess at the Thirteenth Annual Cumberland County Dairy Princess Contest held last Wednesday, at Big Springs High School in Newville.

Before an audience of 300 people and a panel of three judges, Miss Cornman presented a milk presentation in which she portrayed an elderly lady who was in the barn talking to "Ole Bessie" the cow

Miss Cornman told Bessie about Mr. Jones, a farmer down the road, really opened her eyes up to milk. She proceeded to tell about the nutritious value of milk

"Why, I did not know how good milk really was for me" Miss Cornman said "Mr. Jones knows so much"

She ended her presentation by stating that "milk is the creme of the crop of all foods."

Miss Cornman is a 1979 graduate of Boiling Springs High School and is presently a secretary for the Cumberland County Extension Office. The family farm has 120 acres and a herd of 33 milking Holsteins.

In addition to representing the dairy industry of Cumberland County, Miss Cornman will represent Cumberland County in the State Dairy Princess Pageant in Harrisburg in September.

Miss Pamela Friese, the 17 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Friese of R 5, Shippensburg, was chosen as first alternate to Miss Cornman and Ann Basehore, the 18 year old daughter of Mr and Mrs Donald Basehore, was selected as second alternate to Miss Cornman

Miss Friese, a 1980 graduate of Shippensburg Area High School, in her milk promotional presentation, spoke of the importance of milk in the building of healthy bodies and ended with a rifle squad routine while stating "Drink milk for a healthier, happier you"

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

"Please sign on the line."

Have you ever thought about how many times in a week you sign your name? Seems there's precious little you can do today without recording it on some impressive-looking document.

Affix your signature to a piece of paper and you can get married (or unmarried), drive a car, take out a permit to remodel, rebuild, remove or release, sue somebody, open an account, take out a loan or charge anything from a cruise around the world to a pair of roller skates.

Long ago, I learned that the farmer would occasionally approach me with a pen in one hand and a carbon-inserted loan application in the other. "Sign this," he'd request. Farming being the large-investment and line-of-credit business it's become today, I scrawled my name on the spot provided and learned to accept the ever-larger operating amounts without staying awake all night worrying about it.

So, when we recently found ourselves situated at a law office table surrounded by a retinue of loan organizations representatives, we knew that "sign on the line" time had again arrived After a year-long marathon of plans, changes, delays, frustrations and the nation's shakily balanced money markets, a refinancing program to up-date our dairying facilities was finally coming to fruition.

"Would you please sign right here?" came the inevitable request with the first paper handed across the table.

Sheaves of fine print and stacks of first, second and third copies later, the ink was drying on the last signature. An emotional mixture of elation and that now-we've-dug-the-hole-deeper feeling was setting in.

It was then that I glanced at the checkbook stub where out of curiosity I had decided to keep track of how many times we'd signed our names.

During the brief morning's transaction, we'd scrawled a collective total of 72 signatures on papers to borrow, pay, open, close, and attest that we had not been discriminated against nor would discriminate against any others

Every eventuality was covered and we were not thoroughly enwrapped in the tender arms of legality and indebtedness. The phrase "sign your life away" had suddenly become my motto and the paperwork was ready for the filing for posterity and lifetime of paybacks.

The word was "go."

Hold it. The world was "stop." Seems that there was still one teeny, weeny paper — an absolute, must-have, necessary one — that was tied up in the web of the U.S. Postal Service.

At this writing, that lone paper that was mailed two weeks previous has not yet been spit out of the jaws of the postal people It may well be resting in Nome, Alaska, or vacationing in Melbourne, Australia, or have died and gone to postal heaven in Timbuctoo

Or maybe it just got stuck somewhere on one of its pieces of red tape

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

We talk in glowing terms about the tremendous progress that has come to agriculture. There's been a revolution, we say.

Gone are the days of back-breaking work in the hot sun. Gone are the long hours and the physical demands. We talk about the machines that do everything, leaving the farmer to ride over his land in air-conditioned comfort while technology does the work.

And then I watched one of those modern farmers harvesting a hay crop. It was like seeing a dinosaur in his dairy barn along with his high-producing Holstein cows.

This guy, who owns the latest in farm equipment, bales his hay about the same way he did 30 years ago. He has air-conditioned tractors for plowing and cultivating, a self-propelled, do-everything combine for harvesting corn and soybeans, and yet he bales hay the way his father did.

Now I'm not against baling hay—some of the very best farmers do it—but the way this guy was doing it was a shame.

There they were, two guys, a baler and a wagon. One guy sits on the tractor and steers it down the long windrows while the pick-up attachment gathers up the hay and feeds it into the self-tying baler. But that's where progress stops.

On the back end of that baler is an upward tilted chute that funnels the bales toward a flatbed wagon hitched to the baler. And on that wagon is the other guy—trying to pull 80 pound bales out of that shoot and stack them on the wagon.

That would be a hard job standing still and it's worse at three or four miles an hour as the rig goes bumping and bouncing over the field in its never ending quest for hay.

You know what it's like trying to stack bales four or five high without falling off the wagon or having the bales fall off.

There's another problem—as the load builds, the floor space, shrinks until finally the worker is trying to stand in a spot the size of a hay bale while heaving one of those heavy, bulky objects onto the stack which is now higher than his head.

The job is made even worse by the fact that hay is baled on bright sunny days in summer when the temperature is quite high.

This scene is not unusual. Many of the best equipped farmers bale hay this way—even though machines are available that eliminate most of the hand work. Either they cost too much or farmers don't like them or they don't make enough hay to need them—and there are other reasons. But the result is the same; their haymaking techniques are of a Stone Age variety.

If you look back in machinery history you'll find farmers baling hay the same way in the late 1930's. About the only improvement has been the self-tying baler that came along after World War II.

As a small boy of 10, I worked one of those bale wagons along with my older brother. It was all two of us could do to manage those big bales in such a precarious position It took both of us to get them from the chute and into some order on the wagon. And I knew even then that there had to be a better way.

There was! A few years later manufacturers developed bale throwers and wagons that scooped the bale off the ground and placed them in stacks. Then came the large round and large square bales and their associated systems. Also, there are now hay handling techniques that don't involve bales at all.

And yet out of habit or economics, or whatever, farmers cling to the old ways. The hot, sweaty, dirty ways that have made so many farm boys swear they were going to leave the farm and never go back.

The same ways that remind some one-time farm boys why today they only write about hay baling.

Karen Sattazahn named Berks dairy princess

BY LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Staff Correspondent

WYOMISSING — When toastmaster Ernest Miller announced the name of the 1980 Berks County Dairy Princess last Saturday evening, 20-year-old Karen Sattazahn surely looked surprised.

The only daughter of Mr and Mrs Clarence Sattazahn, Womelsdorf, beamed with excitement She had entered the pageant under the encouragement and persuasion of her mother and a member on the dairy princess pageant committee without giving much tnought to the possibility of winning. However, Karen naturally possesses the necessary characteristics and enthusiasm needed to fill the position.

She has always helped around her father's farm as long as she can remember and has been actively involved in dairy clubs since she became old enough to enter 4-H. Karen also enjoys meeting people and will do her best as spokesman for the Berks County dairy industry.

Selected as Karen's alternate during the pageant held at the Sheraton Berkshire Inn, was 21-year-old Janice Savidge She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Savidge, R2 Mertztown Janice also displayed the natural charm and enthusiasm which is looked for in a dairy princess.

During the evening program in which the young ladies were crowned, Janice did a skit with her cow "Moo-Shine", a life sized replica of a dairy cow created by the alternate princess herself

Janice is a graduate of Brandywine High School and is presently employed by Caloric Corporation as a draftsperson. Janice has remained active on the family farm however, helping out after work and on weekends She has served as past president of vocational Industrial Clubs of America and is an advisor of Youth Ministry, a member of the church choir and of the Longswamp Lioness Club

Janice has three brothers. Donald 23; Lee, 19; and Richard, 16. The Savidges are presently milking 50 cows and farming approximately 250 acres They also have 32 heifers and twenty steers Although never having shown dairy cattle personally, Janice has helped her brothers prepare for shows She became interested in becoming a dairy princess after seeing other princesses at local events and because she feels the need to promote her family's major commodity-MILK. The new county dairy princess is a graduate of Conrad Weiser High School and presently is a student at Kutztown State College, studying elementary education and library science. Karen will be entering her third year of college in September

During the summer and on weekends while in school, Karen is employed on her family farm, Zahnheim Holsteins. Her basic duties include milking, driving tractor, especially during hay season, feeding, and gardening. Karen has two younger brothers, Kevin, aged 17, and Kirk, 8 years old.

The Sattazahns maintain a herd of approximately 100 Holsteins, and are presently milking 74. They also farm

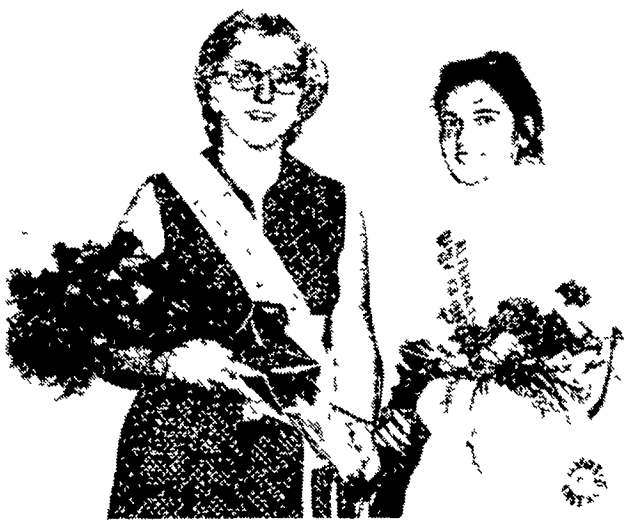
The new Berks County Dairy Princess is Karen Sattazahn, crowned during ceremonies held Saturday night.



Karen Sattazahn, left, the new Berks County Dairy Princess, will be supported in her activities by Janice Savidge, chosen Alternate Dairy Princess.

Moo-Shine is a full sized replica of a Holstein cow, built by Berks County Alternate Dairy Princess Janice Savidge. The cow is used as a prop in her dairy promotion activities.

160 acres, 125 of which is owned.

This active young lady has five cows of her own, two of which have been named Grand Champion at area fairs. Karen has shown cows for 10 years and is quite a showman Other accomplishments include winning a blue ribbon on the county level for a demonstration on milk, and being the area coordinator of County 4-H clubs She has also been a Keystone winner in agriculture two years and attended the citizen short course in Washington, D C

She has been president of the Berks County Junior Holstein Club, Stouchsburg 4-H Club, and Public Affairs Leadership Program, Berks County Council, and is presently the charter president of the Circle K Club at Kutztown.

Karen also is a member of Alpha Beta Alpha, Marion and Pomona Granges, and Pennsylvania State Educators Associations

Karen also is a 4-H leader of the Stouchsburg dairy and vegetable club.

This new dairy princess is eagerly looking forward to her new duties, especially visiting the elementary schools since her interests lie in becoming a teacher. If there was any hint of skepticism of fulfilling her duties as the 1980 Dairy Princess for Berks County, it is being able to answer any questions concerning the dairy industry posed to her by consumers, but she should have no fear, for this dairy princess seems to be very knowledgeable as far as milk or the dairy industry is concerned.

Other contestants vieing for the coveted crown were Cindy Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Howard, R2 Oley; Debra Troutman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs George Troutman, R1 Myerstown; and Michelle Ruppert, daughter of Mr and Mrs Michael Ruppert, Shoemakersville

POURED CONCRETE WALLS ARE FAR STRONGER THAN BLOCK!

You get about 40 % more concrete for your dollar with a poured 8" solid concrete wall as compared to a hollow core block wall

A poured solid concrete wall weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured solid concrete walls have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressure caused by earth wind water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques all heigths and thicknesses of poured solid reinforced concrete are competitively priced

Pa. Junior Shorthorn Assn. receives national award

ROCHESTER, Mn. — The Pennsylvania Junior Shorthorn Association was presented with the coveted Outstanding Club Award during the 13th Annual National Shorthorn Youth Conference, held here on June 12-15.

This award was a summing up of the many first place honors this youth association from the Keystone State brought home. They took first place in the promotional contest with their newspaper and magazine advertisement layout. Their commercial cattleman's motto — "For calves that gain faster, put Shorthorns in your pasture", — also came in first

Helping the Junior association on their way to victory were the third place points from the group's scrapbook and purebred cattleman's motto, and Sheila Peoples' third place in the speech contest.

Sheila and Jeanne Peoples, Volant, were the Pennsylvania delegates to the conference Joan Peoples attended as a non-delegate.

'Decade of Direction' was the theme of this year's conference which featured business meetings and the election of national officers, committee meetings and workshops on embryo transplants, artificial insemination, and records of performance, judging clinics and competition.

One of the highlights for the conference youth came when they toured Torgenson Brothers Oak Hill Farm, Austin, Mn. and saw the infamous 'Blue Ox', along with some of his first calves. These reknowned cattle will be shown at the World Shorthorn Conference in Calgery, Canada

Lauren Carlson, Chokio, Mn, past president of the National Cattlemen's Association spoke to the Shorthorn youth. He challenged the Juniors to get involved and let their ideas be known. He reminded them the protestors who were so vocal with their 'Food is for people, not for profit' slogan are now in our government

Tractor pullers to drive for Easter Seals

HONESDALE — The Honesdale fairgrounds will be the spot where the Tri County Tractor Pullers Association will host an Easter Seal Telethon Benefit Tractor Pull on Sunday, June 29th at 12:30 p.m.

One of the contestants will be John Whetmore the 1979 9000 pounds Farm Stock Champion and President of the Tri County Assoc., driving his Deutz 8006.

Les Houck of the Pennsylvania Tractor Pullers Association notes that while the popularity of the highly sophisticated Super Stock and Modified tractors have been growing at a tremendous rate, the stock farm tractors are the backbone of tractor pulling.

Also included in the classes of the Benefit Pull will be the four wheel drives, which are not only exciting but a lot of fun.

Refreshments will be served on the grounds.

For further information please contact Kenny Wheeler of the Tri County Tractor Pullers Assoc. or the Northeastern Pennsylvania Society for Crippled Children and Adults, Inc.

Free solar energy booklet available

HARRISBURG — Many Pennsylvanians are discovering solar energy as a means to save both money and natural resources.

Rep. Noah Wenger says the Governor's Energy Council has two booklets that can help citizens improve or build their own solar energy system.

The Solar Primer explains in layman's terms how solar energy works. The booklet also outlines the savings that can be obtained by employing solar instead of conventional fuel sources.

"The installation of a solar hot water heater presently costs approximately $2000 for a new home and $2500 for an existing home," Wenger explained. "The yearly savings, depends on water use and type of fuel, will average $125. Greater savings can be expected as the cost of conventional fuel increases.

The Solar Directory lists solar equipment manufacturers in the United States and contains a roster of solar equipment distributors and installers in Pennsylvania.

Those who would like free copies of the booklets should write to the Governor's Energy Council. Alternate Energy Division, 1625 North Front Street, Harrisburg, PA 17102. Or call the toll-free Energy Conservation Hotline at 800-882-8400.

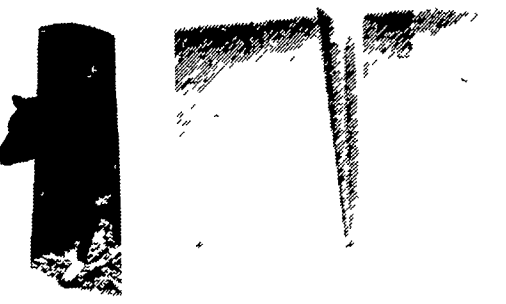
fiberdome® CALFhutches start them out right



Raising calves is a tricky business That's why modern calf raisers are going to individual hutches to help save more calves by cutting down on pneumonia, scours and hoof problems Properly made hutches help eliminate the dampness, crowding and poor ventilation that plague many calf barns

You can be assured of this kind of healthier environment with Fiberdome CALFhutches Their unique one-piece construction of heavy gauge fiber glass makes them weatherproof, so they will last indefinitely with normal care No joints for moisture and bacteria to creep through A white gel-coat finish keeps them cool in summer

When not in use, stakes can be removed and strong U-bolts on top let you conveniently pick units up to clean or stack for compact storage

BY SHEILA MILLER

CLEAR SPRING — The Colonial Charolais Association, McVeytown, held its annual sale and show here on Saturday

Brian Patz, Greensburg, showed the grand champion heifer during the Second Colonial Junior Show. On its way to being selected by Judge Les Haller as the best animal of the show, Patz' heifer won her class and was also tagged the senior champion

Petite Carla Clutter, daughter of Earl and Carolyn Clutter, Prosperity, showed the reserve grand champion heifer. This heifer followed the grand champion all the way—after winning her class, she went on to be the reserve senior champ.

Carla's older sister, Crystal, also took home a rosette for the family's trophy room. With Crystal at her halter, the Clutter's younger heifer was named the reserve junior champion.

Mark Myers, Clear Spring, Maryland, showed the junior champion heifer

In showmanship competition, LeRoy Bowles of Red Lion, was selected as the best showman and fitter in Junior competition. Sue Mitschele, Morris, was the reserve grand champion showman and fitter.

Mitschele also received the Junior Herdsman Award for this year's show.

The top selling bull and highest priced animal at the sale was Riverwood Jager 29, a yearling bull out of the Alma cow family. The $4000 bull, consigned by Riverwood Farms, Powell, Ohio, sold to Dr. Al Boster of Gallipolis, Ohio.

Three females tied for the top prices paid for heifers. Happy Hill Farms, Winchester, Virginia, bought two of the top selling three for $2500.

Traveling to Happy Hills will be Miss Big Shot 539, consigned by Honeybrook Farm Polled Charolais, Princeton, N J Trucking along with her will be RCC Royal Temptress 2985, consigned by Royal Charolais Company, Youngwood, Pennsylvania.

Myers Charolais, host farm for the sale and show, decided to keep one of the sale's heifers Riverwood Mary 1989, also selling for $2500, was consigned by Riverwood Farms, Powell, Ohio.

There were a total of 38¾ lots sold for a total of $64,675. The 36 females averaged $1585, with the 2¾ bulls averaged $2773.

There were 23 buyers present at the sale from Ohio, Virginia, New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Indiana, New Jersey, Kentucky, and South Carolina Volume buyer at the sale was Lewis Franklin, Happy Hill Farm.

Following the cattle auction, the association had a 'fun' auction Various gifts were sold for the benefit of the Junior association

A Pennsylvania Dutch patterned quilt brought the highest price Bidders pushed the figure to $400 The quilt was donated by Lancaster County's Walter and Dorothy Heistand, and Keystone Cattle Service

Governor Richard Thornburgh and Secretary of Agriculture Penrose Hallowell had donated a brass bowl and autographed picture and a 'We're Growing Better' tote bag and sparkling cider, respectively These two items fell under the auctioneers gavel at $15 and $5

Other items auctioned off included a clock from Myers Charolais; a picture from Triple D Farm; a cattle neck collar from Bratton Charolais; a hat from Earl Kindig; maple syrup and honey from Mary and Bob Farm; pastry and baking dish from Cool Spring Farm, bologna from Groff Home Dressed Meats, a picture from Hawthorn's Furniture, a corn husk doll from Diane Bratton; and a quilt from Janice Kaylor, the Colonial Charolais Queen

Close to $900 was raised for the Juniors' premiums and trophies for Eastern National and the Junior Heifer Show, and various projects.

The national president of the American International Charolais Association, Logan Dickerson, of Royal Charolais in Greensburg, attended the Colonial show and sale.

Charolais Show

Talking with Lancaster Farming, Dickerson said the association is planning a weekend symposium for June 28 to be held at North Platte, Nebraska. The participants will hear the latest information on marketing and performance, and will be visiting some of the leading farms in the area.

Dickerson noted that the Charolais breed is going through a culling out process. He said the rapid growth the breed experienced in the late 1960's has leveled off. "The breed has gone past the exotic stage," he commented.

He added that he feels the merits of the Charolais cattle are in their fast rate of gain—performance

"They are efficient feed converters, and produce a greater percentage of red meat through their large size. For the commercial cattlemen, Charolais offer a heavier weaning weight—50 pounds per calf, on the average—which means more pounds for their dollar investment. That's why commercial producers are crossbreeding with Charolais more and more."

Concerning the trend toward the larger market steers, Dickerson said he believes the heavier, more-meat carcasses will be marketable in time—whether the individual consumer is ready now is questionable.

"I think that the wants and needs of the consumer are reflected throughout the beef chain . . . cattlemen breed what the consumer wants. And right now they are telling us they don't want fat.

"In projecting the consumers' desires over the next ten years, we feel they will be picking Charolais for lean meat. We hope we're not like the automobile industry and reading the market all wrong—making Cadillacs while the consumer wants compacts

"Only time will tell. But, we have strong convictions we're right

Mark Myers, left, Clear Spring, exhibited the champion junior heifer, with the reserve junior champion honors going to Crystal Clutter, Prosperity.

Chore-time feed bins, flex-auger®, and other equipment work together to help you modernize quickly, efficiently, economically sow feeding...

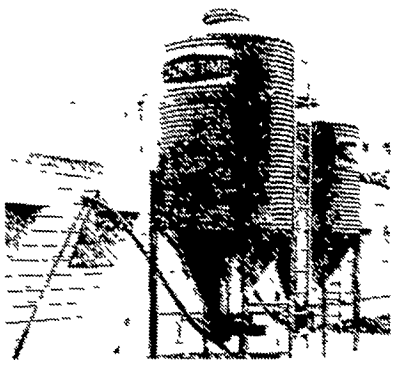
Taking gestating sows out of the "maddening crowd" and putting them into their own individual stalls with a Chore-Time feeding system is the way to bigger litters, better litters, more litters from each sow, and more money for you to keep. Farmers can get back $16 or more for every dollar invested in a Chore-Time Sow Feeding Sytem.



feed bins . . .
With more than 40 models to choose from, Chore-Time's line-up of feed bins lets you choose exactly what you need — not what somebody wants you to have. They're all completely galvanized (no painted parts) and have other quality features that you need in a bin for long years of trouble-free service at low cost.

ventilation...
Keep animals comfortable, and you keep them far more thrifty and far more profitable. Chore-Time's Advanced Air Systems approach combines controlled air inlets with the finest variable speed and single speed fans and other components. They're fitted to your specific building. The result is year-around, day-in and day-out comfort for your animals.

the only fan for pit ventilation...
RLX Fan is the "air pump" used in all Chore-Time Advanced Air Systems. There's no finer variable speed fan available anywhere. Comes with 18- or 24-inch die-cast aluminum blades, has a top-quality totally-enclosed ball bearing motor, and it sets new standards in corrosion-resistant and aerodynamically efficient design and construction. Comes with efficient blow-out hood plus weather-shield hood, at left.

Bull testing nominations open

STATE COLLEGE — Pennsylvania cattle producers should start evaluating this year's bull calf crop to enter their top individuals in the 1980-81 Pennsylvania Bull Testing Program

According to State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, nominations of bull calves born between January, 1980 and April 15, 1980 are now being accepted for the fall testing program First choice in the testing program is given to Pennsylvania producers. If open space remains, out-of-state bulls will be accepted until the pens are full

To be eligible for the Spring Bull Test Sale, the bulls must record a type score of 12 or higher and an adjusted 205 day weight of 475 or 525 pounds, depending on breed The bulls must also have an adjusted 205 day ratio of 100 or higher

"Sale prices for performance tested bulls over the past few years show that people are willing to pay more for a bull that has a good, honest performance rating," Hallowell said "If we look at the bulls that sold this past year, bulls with a Final Index Ratio above 100, averaged $1,540 each "

The testing program is designed to provide information towards improvement of the breed Both large and small producers can participate and have their bulls compared under similar conditions.

The deadline for nominations is AUGUST 31 For a copy of the Bull testing Rules and Regulations or applications, contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, Meat Animal Evaluation Center, 651 Fox Hollow Road, State College, PA 16801, phone, (814) 238-2527

The Bull Testing Program is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in cooperation with Penn State and the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association

ARCADIAN® liquid gives a profitable boost to alfalfa after every cutting.

Give alfalfa a liquid boost after the first cutting.

That's when topdressing N-P-K, and micronutrients in an Arcadian liquid fertilizer made with POLY-N pays big dividends in high yielding, high quality alfalfa You can even add pesticides if you need to.

When it's done right, a topdressing after every cutting will increase the yields It will raise the protein content Help the crop compete better against grasses And improve the vigor for a long stand life

Arcadian liquid makes it easy Made the SLF way Arcadian liquid gives you uniform distribution of fertilizer ingredients from start to finish It's truly the efficient way to turn alfalfa into green gold

Inter-State's Gartley dies

Boyd Gartley

COCHRANVILLE — Boyd C. Gartley, director of member relations for Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative, died unexpectedly Saturday morning, June 21.

Gartley, in addition to his activities as director of the Co-op's member relations activities, also handled Inter-State's public relations duties.

He was associate editor of the "Pennmarva" news magazine, published for members of the Pennmarva Dairymen's Federation. That group includes Inter-State, Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers, and Capitol Milk Producers Cooperative.

Gartley's death was attributed to a heart attack.

A memorial service is scheduled at the Cochranville Methodist Church for Sunday, June 29 at 3 p.m. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon at the same church.

Gartley resided with his wife in Cochranville. The family mailing address is Box 269, Cochranville, PA 19330.

The family has requested appropriate memorial contributions be made to the Cochranville Methodist Church in lieu of flowers.

Gartley was known to his co-workers and associates in the dairy industry as a hard worker. Many people commented that Inter-State will have difficulty finding a person to fill the position with the Co-op as well as Gartley did.

Tested boars mean more profit

BY DORIS HENRIQUE
Delaware Ag Writer

NEWARK, Del. — "A performance tested boar can save his owner up to $3000 over his productive lifetime in feed efficiency passed on to his offspring," says University of Delaware extension livestock specialist Richard Fowler. "This is one reason there's little trouble selling the young boars that make it through the state's official boar test each year."

Forty-four animals in 11 pens are involved in the 1980 trials, which started at the end of May. The trials are being run at the state's Swine Test Station on the farm of Mrs. Carlos Elliott, just south of Laurel.

Five breeds — Berkshire, Yorkshire, Duroc, Landrace, and Chester White — are represented, coming from Pennsylvania, Maryland, New York, and North Carolina.

Animals like this Yorkshire boar are participating in tests aimed at identifying top-performing breeding stock. A high indexing boar can save his owner thousands of dollars in feed-efficient offspring.

Hogging it down — competitors in Delaware's 1980 Boar Test have nothing better to do than eat, sleep and grow.

The purpose of the test, which is sponsored jointly by the Delaware Pork Producers Association and the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service, is to identify animals that score well in such heritable traits as backfat thickness and average daily gain and feed conversion. Animals are also scored for conformation.

All these factors will affect the production efficiency and marketability of their offspring. Conformation traits and amount of backfat are highly heritable. Feed conversion and average daily gain are 30 to 40 percent heritable, Fowler said.

A good tested boar has the capacity to improve the feed efficiency of his offspring by about one-tenth of a pound, explains Fowler. This adds up to a potential savings to the producer of about $1.50 per market hog.

A single boar can sire a minimum of 650 pigs a year. This means a savings of nearly $1,000 per year, probably for three years.

Delaware farmers who've bought tested stock from previous trials don't require any convincing. They want to buy more. In fact, reports Fowler, people are already lining up to buy boars from this latest trial when they go up for auction next September.

In spite of the fact that no Delaware boars are involved in this year's trial, the livestock specialist strongly favors continuing the program.

"My feeling is that we'll test boars from other states as long as they have good sales acceptance here," he says. "I see us continuing to distribute boars to local producers."

In following up on animals from previous trials, he's found the performance of pigs they've sired to be good—a noted improvement, in fact, over non-test boars.

"I think the proper way to use a tested boar is to take him home and mate him to your best gilts," says Fowler. "Don't try to mate him to everything on the farm. By using him with your best replacement gilts you should be able to make rapid herd improvement in terms of litter size, growth rate and conformation."

It's going to take this kind of good herd management to make money raising hogs over the next decade, he predicts. Everybody agrees the 70's were a good time to be in the pig business.

Cost-effective weed control to highlight field day

GEORGETOWN, Del. — Current research at the University of Delaware's Georgetown Substation could result in more economical weed control for many soybean growers.

Agricultural Experiment Station researcher David L. Regehr, notes that growers ordinarily apply a mixture of two preemergence herbicides: one, such as Lasso, to control mainly grasses, and another, such as Lorox, to control broadleaf weeds.

This combination works well, but is not effective against large-seeded broadleaf weeds like velvetleaf, jimsonweed, morning-glory and common ragweed.

Soybean growers whose fields are infested with these weeds must either follow up with a postemergence herbicide such as Blazer or Basagran, or cultivate, or both.

Blazer and Basagran control these deep germinating weeds effectively, but they cost about $20 per acre to use. Two of Regehr's research projects, which will be featured at the University of Delaware's Farm and Home Field Day, evaluate methods of lowering the cost of using postemergence herbicides to control velvetleaf, morning-glory, jimsonweed and common ragweed.

In a study which he began last year, Regehr is comparing two methods of chemical control against the four weeds. He treated half the infested plots with the usual combination of Lasso and Lorox, then followed up with a timely postemergence application of Blazer or Basagran.

In the other plots he omitted the Lorox. He found that a timely postemergence application of Blazer or Basagran controlled all the broadleaf weeds.

The Lorox, Regehr says, which costs about $6 per acre, provides no additional weed control, and may therefore be unnecessary in fields where postemergence herbicides will be required.

The second study concerns the method of applying Blazer or Basagran. Regehr says broadcast application is necessary to control the target weeds on drilled beans. However, it would be wasteful to broadcast these rather costly chemicals over soybeans in 30-inch rows, especially for growers who like to cultivate to control weeds between the rows.

Regehr is building a new applicator, similar to some being tried in the South and Midwest, which can band the postemergence herbicide in the rows. The device, a ten-inch-wide tunnel with three spray tips, reduces the amount of spray used by two-thirds, and is good for spraying under windy conditions.

On cultivated soybeans in 30-inch rows, Regehr says, you can band postemergence herbicides for $6 or $7 per acre instead of the $20 per acre it would cost to broadcast.

The concept is simple, Regehr says, and farmers could build their own applicators. Regehr's equipment and experimental plots will be on view at the University of Delaware's Farm and Home Field Day, scheduled for August 13, 1980, at the Georgetown Substation. Activities will begin at 9:30 a.m.

David Regehr is building a device that will reduce the amount of postemergence herbicide wasted on spaces between soybean rows. The finished machine will be on view at the University of Delaware's Farm and Home Field Day, slated for August 13 at the Georgetown Substation.

Southeast region gets new area agent

LEESPORT — Warren J. Cook, Jr. has been appointed to Penn State's extension service staff as an associate Extension agent and assigned to the Southeast Extension Region, effective June 16.

Thomas B. King, Penn State associate dean for extension, points out that Cook will work with county Extension agents in developing and conducting educational community resource development programs in Berks, Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Lehigh, Montgomery, Northampton and Philadelphia counties.

He is headquartered in the Berks County Agricultural Center, Leesport.

A native of Michigan, Mr. Cook received a bachelor of science degree in urban studies from Michigan State University in 1969 and master of urban planning degree from the University of Illinois in 1980.

Prior to being named to the Penn State Extension staff, he was employed by the Michigan, Department of Management and Budget; Kankekee County, Michigan, Regional Planning Commission; and Illinois State Geological Survey. He also served four years in the U.S. Air Force.

He and his wife, Eugenie, are the parents of a son.

Hay outlook good on Md. farm scene

COLLEGE PARK, Md — Major news on the farm equipment scene this year has been a big increase in forage harvester sales and a sharp decline in sales of tractors and combines compared with a year ago.

John W. Wysong, professor of agricultural and resource economics, noted that dairy and beef cattle farmers have enjoyed fairly good times, starting in 1977. They now appear to be reducing their potential income taxes by investing in forage-harvesting equipment to replace obsolete or worn-out machinery.

Grain farmers exhibited a similar pattern in 1978 and 1979, following a favorable trend in grain prices. But depressed cash grain prices currently are not encouraging farmers to buy tractors and other grain machinery.

There is probably more profit potential nowadays for hay than for corn, says Lester R. Vough, extension forage crops specialist and associate professor of agronomy

Vough points out that the pleasure horse industry in Maryland is a big consumer of hay, along with dairy and beef cattle. Thus, it is hay-deficit state.

Alfalfa acreage in Maryland suffered sharp cutbacks 15 to 20 years ago when farmers could not control the ravaging alfalfa weevil with then-legal insecticides. Switching from hay to corn production was made easy by cheap nitrogen fertilizer and rising prices for land and feed grains

Now the weevil can be controlled with new insecticides and scouting programs. Nitrogen fertilizer is no longer a "cheap" commodity for corn growers, and grain prices are currently depressed

Vough does not advocate a rapid switch back to hay-growing, however "First, we have to develop a marketing system. We need to organize a hay-growers association"

He noted that horsemen generally discriminate against Maryland-grown hay becuase of its reputation for poor quality and lack of an efficient marketing delivery system.

Most alfalfa growers in Maryland last year found a limited market for their product, he commented, while horse owners shipped in sizeable quantities of hay from other states.

A few reputable Maryland producers have developed a ready buyer clientele, however. A well-known farm in central Maryland is reported to find a ready market each year for its 200 acres of top-quality hay. He urges Maryland dairy farmers and beef cattle producers to similarly develop a hay management program to "sell the best and feed the rest."

The Maryland extension specialist noted that big, round bales are not the answer for producing good quality hay, and they are not suited to leaving in the field during typically rainy Maryland winters

To provide farmers an opportunity to see what he considers a new, practical way of handling hay, Vough has set up a public demonstration of a disk mower-conditioner, introduced from Europe

xxx

The U.S. imported more meat – 1.36 million metric tons – than any other country in 1979, says the Department of Agriculture

State dairy farmers set two records

LANCASTER — Pennsylvania dairy farmers set two new records in 1979. For the first time they produced over eight billion pounds of milk with a farm value exceeding one billion dollars.

Twenty years ago, milk production in the Commonwealth was short of total consumption by about 15 per cent. In 1979, production was 20 per cent over consumption.

The change to a surplus has developed at a fairly uniform rate, says Blair J. Smith, associate professor of agricultural economics at Penn State.

"Pennsylvania consumers should be pleased with the developing surpluses," Smith stated, "since surplus milk has the effect of holding prices down through competition for sales. Also, surpluses avoid some of the higher costs of moving milk from more distant areas."

He indicated Pennsylvania ranks fifth among all states in milk production. The Commonwealth has been among the top five milk producing states for many years. Dairying is first among all agricultural enterprises in the state, Dr. Smith noted, with dairy farms accounting for about 50 per cent of the total value of sales by all farmers in the Commonwealth.

He said two factors account for the change from deficit to surplus milk production. First, milk production in Pennsylvania increased by 22 to 23 per cent from 1959 to 1979. Second, consumption of milk in all uses declined by 18 to 19 per cent per person in the same years

The position of Pennsylvania in milk-sufficient in contrary to that of the Northeast generally, it was pointed out. Deficits of 15 to 20 per cent have been estimated for Ohio and West Virginia — and the 11 additional states north and east of these two.

For the United States as a whole, production and consumption are in close balance every year because both exports and imports of dairy products are small and tend to largely offset one another.

Smith and other economists are not certain why the upward trend in milk self-sufficiency is so marked in Pennsylvania What will happen in the future is even less sure. Pennsylvania dairymen have always had the advantage of closeness to large consuming populations.

Increased costs of transportation, relative to other cost, have made nearness to markets increasingly important.

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

It's a great feeling to know that you are the master of your farmlands . that when you treat your soil right, it will treat you right Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range A good pasture with a pH of 6.5 or higher, for example, will make 300 to 400 lbs. of beef per acre and produce up to $100 gross income per acre. This means with the help of lime, profits from pastures can compare favorably with feed or grain crops.

The Milk Check

TOM JURCHAK
County Agent

Irresistible

In the last issue of the American Farm Bureau Federation's "Dairy Situation" was a one liner I just couldn't resist repeating.

After a story on the commercial use of dairy products in 1979 that showed only cheese sales had increased while butter, powder and frozen product sales all declined, there followed another paragraph explaining that cheese was so popular because it was delicious, nutritious, available in 200 domestic varieties, and economical with no waste.

Then came the punch line which someone should put on a bumper sticker for June Dairy Month — "What a friend we have in cheeses"!

Lookin' Good

Things are looking good for the new Agway-H.P. Hood milk marketing venture called Agri-Mark

Even though the solicitation of members was two weeks late getting started, they signed up over a billion pounds of milk in the first week and now have passed the two billion pound mark. They need an annual volume of three billion and believe that it's only a matter of getting around to all the farmers.

Reports are that refusals have been very few. Now they're working on the fence sitters and so it will only take a few more weeks.

All the organizational machinery has been set up, including the liquidation and dissolution of Yankee Milk whose assests will be sold to Agri-Mark subject to the approval of the board of directors. Even the Yankee member equity plan was amended to conform with the Agri-Mark plan.

A "structure committee" has been named to form the new cooperative and has already approved by-laws, quality standards, milk promotion contributions and a dues structure, as well as naming an interim board of directors.

Most of the members of the new cooperative were Yankee members or Hood Producers. All of them are contributing 94 cents a hundered pounds of a year's milk production to raise $28 million to help finance the purchase of the Hood facilities.

Agway will contribute another $28 million to close the deal when enough farmers sign up to guarantee the milk supply.

Easily the most ambitious effort in eastern milk marketing ventures, it is attracting national attention and may set a pattern for similar structures if it is as successful as hoped.

WHAT'S NEW

EPHRATA — Chore-Time Equipment, Inc. has introduced an entirely new air-moving machine created to help farmers control their energy costs. The new fan is designed to meet the ventilation needs of poultry and livestock confinement houses.

Named the Metre Fan because of its one metre (approximately 40 inches) diameter, the fan achieves an ideal balance of energy efficiency, air moving performance, and long-life reliability, according to

Leon Martin of Agri-Equipment, Chore-Time Equipment distributor at Ephrata, PA.

A unique new compound blade curvature was recently developed for this fan. The blade design, plus the use of a new unusually energy-efficient type 230-volt motor, allows the belt-driven fan to move more air per unit of electrical energy.

The fan also features heavy gauge construction with a heavy coating of baked epoxy paint on a pre-primed surface. These elements combine to give the fan a long-lasting, good appearance as well as a rust-free life, Martin added.

Tax break deadline is July 1

LANCASTER — "Farmland and forest land owners are reminded that they have until July 1, 1980 to indicate to their county tax assessor that they would like to apply for 'use value' assessment of their land for the 1981 tax year," says Peter H. B. Norton, community affairs specialist, Penn State.

Farmland and forest land owners having 10 or more contiguous acres apply and participate voluntarily. The landowner must take the initiative to indicate an interest in the program.

However, he is not required to make the specific decision whether or not to participate until he is provided information showing the taxes he would normally pay and the taxes he would pay under a "use value" assessment. This information is provided in his discussion with the county tax assessment office personnel.

The program is rather new in Pennsylvania It has been available for the five tax years of 1976-1980. The date the greatest participation has been those counties that have had a recent update of their tax assessments Generally, in those counties, the "use value" assessment is lower than the normal assessment.

"This results in a lower tax bill for the landowner," adds Norton.

There are three categories that the landowner may choose from for consideration They are Agricultural Use, Agricultural Reserve, and Forest Reserve. His choice is based on his land use and his discussion with the county tax assessor.

The preferential assement — use value — under the program generally result in less taxes for the landowners than he would otherwise pay The purpose of the reduced tax incentive is to aid in keeping land in agriculture use, forest use, and open space use in the Commonwealth

The use value assessment program provided for in the Pennsylvania Farmland and Forest Land Assessment Act - Act 319 of 1974, commonly referred to as the "Clean and Green Act," is a voluntary program

Grangers ask mushroom quota

HARRISBURG — Charles E Wismer, Jr , Master of the Pennsylvania State Grange, called for the International Trade Commission to institute an annual mushroom import quota of 48 million pounds and to maintain the present 3.2 percent per pound tariff tax to protect the domestic mushroom grower, in Harrisburg today.

"Imported mushrooms are seriously eroding the domestic mushroom market," Wismer commented.

"It is our understanding that there are no import quotas to control the intake of foreign-grown mushrooms."

He went on to say that this leaves the domestic mushroom grower "unprotected against loss of income and possible bankruptcy."

Mushroom imports have risen 19 percent over last year's levels, leaving the domestic market "extremely depressed," he said.

"The most ironic part of this whole thing," Wismer said, "is that foreign growers were originally encouraged to enter the market with incentives offered by the U S. Government

"The damage potential of this action is great. Many of our members who grow mushrooms have complained bitterly that foreign mushrooms are driving them out of their own market."

Farm accident fatalities declined 20 percent from 1970 to 1976, the U.S. Department of Agriculture says.

Rat-catcher care?
A reader asks:

What is a simple health care program for farm cats?

Dr. Riegel comments:

Farm cats - a beneficial asset or a costly nuisance?

This depends greatly on how they are kept, what they are fed, and what measures are taken to prevent some of the major diseases plaguing cats which may be passed on to other farm animals.

In addition to the above, some measure of cat planning should be adopted.

Some of the definite problems with cats arise when uncontrolled breeding takes place Soon the place is over run with cats. And, as the cat population increases, the chances for disease increases as well.

The diseases encountered are feline distemper, feline pneumonitis, feline rhinotrachitis, and calcivirus.

Besides these diseases that may be devastating to the feline population, there are other diseases which theoretically can be passed on to other farm animals such as leptospirosis, toxoplasmosis, and tuberculosis This may occur when cats are using feed carts and feed troughs for litter boxes

The benefits cats bring to the farm come from their threat to the rodent population

Beginning with any health care program, you should decide how many cats are a suitable number for your farm When this is decided, this number should be maintained

Neutering all the cats would be the most effective way of accomplishing this, but could be quite expensive However, neutering just male cats is sufficient in situations where there is no problem with strays

As for a health program for the cats, a basic vaccination of feline distemper vaccine, and rabies vaccine is a must. Complete protection with vaccinations for feline rhinotrachitis and calcivirus (two viruses that cause upper respiratory infection in cats and certain wild animals, such as skunks and raccoons), could be accomplished with a little more expense.

If cats would get sick, there are antibiotics used routinely on most farms that could be used to effect a cure

Consult your veterinarian.
